Defense Annual Review Team
BY BRIG. GEN. ROBERT G. WOOD, USA
Chief, DART

RESPONSIBILITY for Department of Defense participation in the formulation of the U. S. governmental position in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) Annual Reviews rests primarily with the Secretary of Defense and is discharged through the Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs. The latter is responsible for developing, in consultation with the Joint Chiefs of Staff as appropriate, the United States policy on Defense aspects of this matter, and for representing the Department of Defense on inter-governmental bodies dealing with this problem. These responsibilities are carried out in Paris, which is the seat of NATO, by the Defense Advisor to the Chief of the U. S. Mission to NATC (USRO) through a Deputy to the Defense Advisor who has been designated as the Chief of the Defense Annual Review Team (DART).

Brig. Gen. Wood

The Defense Annual Review Team is, therefore, an outpost of the Office of the Secretary of Defense, permanently stationed in Paris as a part of the United States Mission, and charged with the study and evaluation of the military plans of the NATO countries with a view to the preparation of a recommendation to the Secretary of Defense regarding the Defense aspect of problems facing the NATO Ministers at meetings which were held in Paris from 14 to 16 of last December.

In order to understand the concept of DART's operation and the framework in which it works, it is necessary to review briefly the over-all organization of (Please turn to Page 763)

Eisenhower Battle Jacket Appears Doomed, Green-Gray Uniform Seen As Replacement

The Army will put its Olive Drab uniform in mothballs and eliminate the Eisenhower Battle Jacket if top echelon approval is given to a plan now in the works at the Pentagon.

Instead of O.D., the Army is expected to adopt a green-gray uniform, which scored a high popularity rating in a newly completed world-wide uniform preference survey.

Not out of the running yet is the familiar officer's uniform consisting of the green jacket and "pinks," which also won strong support in the fashion showings.

The thousands of men who saw three uniforms displayed in the survey reportedly had varied reactions insofar as the degree of their enthusiasm for the green-gray or the green and "pinks."

They were, however, overwhelmingly against the O.D. uniform and Eisenhower Jacket. Dissatisfaction with this attire is understood to have ranged upwards of 90 per cent in many commands.

A final decision on whether to adopt a new uniform, and if so which one had not yet been reached as THE JOURNAL went to press.

It is still possible that despite its disfavor the Eisenhower Jacket and O.D. uniform will be retained, but the strong objections recorded during the survey make adoption of a new uniform a probability.

And it appears likely that General Matthew B. Ridgway, Army Chief of Staff, will recommend to his superiors that it be the green-gray uniform.

This uniform has been field-tested for more than two years by the crack 3d Infantry Regiment in the Nation's Capital and is said to have won strong advocates.

Dr. Hannah Lays It On Capitol Line— Tells What's Needed To Boost Morale

Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah, with obvious approval of Secretary Charles E. Wilson, has gone to Congress with a program to raise the attractiveness of military service and enhance national security.

Testifying on the Pentagon's fiscal '55 budget, Dr. Hannah laid on the line before the House Appropriations Committee the steps which must be taken to retain "hard core" personnel in uniform.

His presentation in connection with the budget evidences the fact the Defense Department has reached a "chips are down" stage in its efforts to attract and retain outstanding men for military careers.

Said Dr. Hannah:

"Secretary Wilson, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the top men in all four Services, both military and civilian, consider retaining more men after they have completed their first enlistments or their two-year periods of induction as one of the crucial necessities of the day."

He added:

"One of the major objectives of our current planning is to increase the number and percentage of trained professionals within all the Services. . . . That their number and percentage be increased is considered essential to our national security."

Then, Dr. Hannah told what he thought was wrong, the steps being taken by the Defense Department to alleviate the situation and action which Congress must approve to see the job through.

In his presentation, Dr. Hannah analyzed discrepancies in current legislation which permit benefits to Servicemen—sometimes worth as much as $5,000—

House Group Acts To Relieve Restrictions

The House Armed Services Committee acted this week to kill restrictions on officer retirements and to supplant the Davis Rider with new, sliding-scale ceilings for top officer grades.

Both steps are contained in the Arends Bill, HR 7103, which the Committee voted to report out favorably following extensive hearings in open and executive sessions.

Sponsored by Representative Leslie C. Arends (R-Ill.), the bill is designed to improve long-range promotion planning within each of the Services. It also establishes legal ceilings for the number of officers the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps may have in the rank of major and above.

As finally approved by the Committee, the bill contains two significant changes:

1—The Committee dropped the percentage limitations previously contained in the measure and retained only the numerical limitations which were set on the number of officers each of the Services may have in top ranks, based on varying strengths.

2—The Committee added a new section which calls for an annual report from each of the Service secretaries. This report, to be submitted not later than 30 Jan. of each year to both the House and Senate Armed Services Committees, shall give the estimated active-duty personnel requirements for the Service for the coming fiscal year, the estimated number of commissioned officers in each grade on active duty (both permanent and temporary) which the Service expects to promote during the coming fiscal year, and an analysis of the current distribution by grade of commissioned officers (both permanent and temporary) serving on active duty.

A spokesman for the Committee said the bill probably will not be called up for a House vote before early next month.

Air Academy Costs Set At $145 Million

The estimated cost of building an academy for the Air Force was upped $20 million this week by Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott as the Senate Armed Services Committee opened hearings on the Air Academy bill which passed the House last month.

Secretary Talbott previously testified that the minimum cost of the Academy would be $125 million. He said a more detailed estimate has now been completed "which indicates that the cost will be about $145 million to be expended over a five-year period." He noted, however that this is a "liberal" estimate and that (Continued on Back Page)

Retired Personnel Would Benefit From Tax Cut Voted By House Group

Promise of a tax cut for retired personnel of the Armed Forces was held out this week in action taken by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Voting 17-8, the Committee approved a plan to permit an additional exemption of $1200 on retirement income for "those over 65 receiving dividend, interest, pension, or annuity income and those under 65 who have retired under a public or private retirement plan." The $1200 exemption would be added to other exemptions already permitted retired personnel.

It would, however, be reduced by whatever tax-exempt income the retired person now receives, such as disability retirement pay, veterans' pensions or social security benefits.

Additionally, the $1200 exemption would be reduced if the retired person earns over $900 annually from employment. For each $75 above the $900 figure, the exemption would be reduced $100.

The measure approved by the Committee is the same one contained in a bill HR 5180, introduced last May by Representative Noah M. Mason (R-Ill.), except that the Mason bill calls for $1500 deduction.

To become law, the amendment to current tax legislation must pass the House, be approved by the Senate Finance Committee, the Senate and the President.

Gen. Shelton Asst. Chief At AA-Guided Missiles Branch

Three key officers at Ft. Bliss, Tex., are now holding new assignments following a three-way shift of duties involving Brig. Gen. Cyrus Q. Shelton, Col. Earl W. Heathcote, and Lt. Col. Elmer E. Twining.

General Shelton, Chief of Staff since 1950, has assumed duties as Assistant Commandant of the Antiaircraft and Guided Missiles Branch of The Artillery School. In his new position he will be responsible for the specialized training of thousands of enlisted men and officers in courses varying in length from a few days to several months. These students include not only U. S. Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps personnel, but many students from Allied foreign countries.

Since the departure of Brig. Gen. Hobart Hewett for the Far East Command last fall, Col. Joy T. Wrean had been acting Assistant Commandant of the School.

Colonel Heathcote succeeded General Shelton as Chief of Staff. Since September 1950, Colonel Heathcote had been commander of the Antiaircraft Artillery

Replacement Training Center at the post. During this period, he supervised the training of more than 130,000 troops, taking new recruits just entering the Army from civilian life and turning them into combat-trained soldiers in 16 weeks of intensive training.

Lt. Col. Twining became commanding officer of the AAA Replacement Training Center, succeeding Colonel Heathcote.

508th Airborne from Benning, Red Devils To Campbell

Troops of the 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team moved this week from Ft. Benning, Ga., to their new home at Ft. Campbell, Ky.

Only a few troops remained at Ft. Benning to handle last minute details. However, the transfer will have been completed entirely by the end of the month.

The team commanded by Col. Glenn J. McGowan is composed of the 508th Airborne Infantry Regiment, 320th Airborne Field Artillery Battalion, 598th Airborne Engineer Company and 19th Airborne Quartermaster Detachment.

Big City Commissaries Seem Saved By Defense Official's Testimony

The threat to 38 metropolitan area commissaries operated by the Armed Forces appears to be averted according to newly disclosed testimony of Assistant Secretary Hannah.

It is recalled that late last year when the Defense Department announced that six commissaries would be shut down as of 31 Dec., the fate of the 38 big city stores was left open, subject to a "continuing study."

That the Defense Department has no intention to shut them down is evident in Dr. Hannah's statement to the House Appropriations Committee, as made available this week.

Said Dr. Hannah:

"The operation of commissaries and post exchanges has been the subject of considerable discussion and controversy. People in the military services feel that these operations should be considered as partial compensation for some of the benefits they forego by remaining in uniform rather than returning to civilian life. I suppose the question will always be debated, and commissaries and post exchanges will continue to be the targets of criticism."

The Assistant Secretary concluded:

"But as long as the military services cannot pay competitive salaries and wages, and the commissaries can sell groceries to military people at a substantial savings, the Department of Defense must continue in favor of operating them."

Lt. Gen. Paul Heads Retired Officer Assn.

An Army G-1 expert, Lt. Gen. Willard S. Paul, USA-Ret., has assumed duties as president of the Retired Officers Association.

General Paul succeeds Vice Adm. H. G. Hamlet, USCG-Ret., who died on 24 Jan.

The new president is widely known in all the Services, has served as a Defense Department consultant during recent months, and enjoys the friendship of many members of Congress as a result of his pre-retirement service as Army G-1.

General Paul becomes the fourth president of the Association, a patriotic organization formed in 1929 to assist retired personnel of the various services in meeting the problems of retirement and to present their views in official quarters. The organization is made up of approximately 22,000 members, active and retired, of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service.

General Paul, a native of Worcester, Mass., was named Assistant to the Director of Defense Mobilization for Non-Military Defense in December 1953. A manpower-personnel expert, Paul is responsible for assisting the Director of ODM in developing readiness measures to assist Federal agencies and industry in taking steps that ensure continuity of essential governmental functions and wartime production in the event of enemy attack.

During WWII, General Paul, who entered the army as a private in 1916, served in France as Commanding General of the 26th Infantry Division. In June 1945 he was appointed G-1 in SHAEF and in September 1945 named Deputy Chief of Staff, Headquarters European Theater. In October 1945 he was assigned Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, Office of Chief of Staff, Washington. He has been awarded Distinguished Service Medal and Oak Leaf Cluster. He was retired 31 Dec. 1948.

only if they leave active duty.

He described the impact of housing shortages, the effects of curtailed family care and dependent education—a matter particularly close to the Assistant Secretary, who is also president of Michigan State College.

The Manpower and Personnel chief described the importance of commissaries and post exchanges to military families.

He spoke of broken contracts in connection with retirement privileges and urged that adequate promotion opportunities be assured.

Dr. Hannah stressed that, wherever possible, the Defense Department will take action, but he added that military leaders "earnestly hope" Congress will receive favorably forthcoming legislative proposals.

Detailed stories on points raised by Dr. Hannah in his comprehensive statement to the Appropriations Committee will be found on the next page.

Retirement Points Granted For Aero Med. Convention

Reserve retirement point credits may be earned by Medical Service Reserve Officers on inactive duty for attendance at the 25th Annual Aero Medical Association meeting.

This authorization covers eligible physicians, dentists, veterinarians, nurses, women's medical specialists, and Medical Service Corps officers of the U. S. Navy and Air Force.

RADM. Bertram Groesbeck, jr., MC, USN (Ret.), president of the Association, will open the meeting at 9 a.m. Monday, 29 March, in the Presidential Ballroom of the Statler Hotel, Washington, D. C. A three-day program of scientific presentations and discussions will follow, with participation by the chief air force medical officers of six foreign nations as well as by officer and civilian scientists of the U. S. Navy and Air Force.

Point credits will be awarded to eligible Reserve officers on the basis of one point for each day of attendance, provided sessions attended total at least two hours. Each day of the meeting will be considered a session. Reserve officers will be required to register for each day's session with their respective services, and properly authenticated reports of attendance will be forwarded to the cognizant Reserve recording unit to assure creditation.

Defense Dept. Readies Medical Care Bill, Will Reflect Moulton Report Proposals

The Defense Department late this week was reported ready to send to the Bureau of the Budget—and then to the Capitol — legislation to implement the President's appeal for "more generous use" of family medical care.

The bill is expected to reflect recommendations of the Moulton Commission, which last year expressed concern over inequities in medical care for families of Service personnel and recommended use of civilian doctors and hospitals to augment military medical facilities.

The proposed legislation also is designed to establish in more precise terms than has been done in the past the right of Service families to receive medical care. Congress has always voted funds for the family medical care program, but it has been stated that specific authorization legislation is desirable.

The Moulton Commission plan would require Service families who use civilian doctors or hospitals to pay a nominal fee. This is intended to prevent any abuse.

Whether or not the American Medical Association will oppose the plan—and if so, to what degree—is not yet known. The Defense Department is known to have discussed the proposal in detail with the A.M.A., which in the past has on numerous occasions voiced strong opposition to the dependent care program.

Meantime, Congress has been informed of the impact on Service morale of inadequacies in the dependent care field.

Testifying on the fiscal '55 defense budget, Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah told the House Appropriations Committee that the need for help to achieve an equitable program "cannot be overemphasized."

He said:

"It has been established plainly that worry about the health of dependents and the availability of adequate care for them in times of sickness or accident has an adverse effect upon morale, particularly that of men separated from their families while on duty overseas."

"The Services," Dr. Hannah stressed, "want the kind of men who have a sense of responsibility for their dependents and are finding it hard to keep them under current conditions."

Two Army Colonel Sons Win USMA Appointments

Senator John F. Kennedy (R-Mass.) has announced the selection of two students, both sons of Army colonels, as principal candidates for appointment to West Point from his state.

The selectees are Robert M. Bunker, son of Col. Robert T. Bunker, IGD, now stationed in Tokyo, and Harold C. Lyon, son of Col. H. C. Lyon, GSC, who is now in Europe with the Seventh Army. Senator Kennedy said the selections were made after a complete survey of the candidates' background and schooling, together with a written mental examination. A special board headed by Col. John M. Kemper, headmaster of Phillips Exeter, interviewed some 20 candidates who had survived initial screening before the final selections were made.

Both young men are students at Braden's, Cornwall-on-the-Hudson.

Dr. Hannah Outlines Causes For Morale Ills, Offers Remedy Plan to Congress

On this page and elsewhere in this issue of THE JOURNAL are highlights from the statement made by Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah to the House Appropriations Committee during testimony on the fiscal year 1955 budget. Even before the report of the Womble Committee—but particularly subsequent to its release—Dr. Hannah has been a consistent and forthright advocate of action to raise the attractiveness of military service. In this, he has won the full support of Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson and other leaders, in and out of the Pentagon.

The statement to the House Committee is notable in that Dr. Hannah spells out here in considerable detail to the Capitol "purse watchers" the action which he says is necessary to insure that the "hard core" of the Armed Forces is vitalized.

Defense Dept. Asks Congressional O.K. For More Army Officers In Fiscal '55

The Defense Department has asked Congress to approve 8,700 officers in addition to the 106,000 previously scheduled for the end of fiscal year '55 and said the action was necessary to avert another large involuntary release program.

Army officer strength had been scheduled to drop from 128,000 to 106,000.

The Pentagon action, forecast in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL, was disclosed in testimony by Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah before the House Appropriations Committee.

On the basis of his forceful presentation, there is good reason to believe the Committee will go along with the plan.

Dr. Hannah said the Army needs the "extra numbers" in order to permit the call to active duty of all ROTC graduates this June without the need of a large force-out program. It has been estimated that 5,000 Reserve officers would be forced out if all ROTC graduates were called to active duty without a change in the previous budget plans.

Nonetheless, Dr. Hannah acknowledged that some force-outs are in prospect, "keeping in mind the combat effectiveness of the Army and fairness to individual officers. Only the least effective officers, and those overage in grade, or in excess of need by specialty, would be separated involuntarily," he added.

Another part of Dr. Hannah's proposal would authorize transfer to the Air Force for pilot training of Army ROTC graduates who are qualified and who volunteer.

But the heart of the plan is the addition tion of the 8,700 officers.

Army officials say that if Congress O.K.'s this proposal, there will be no major force-out program as the ROTC second lieutenants are absorbed.

Undoubtedly, there will be a rigorous elimination of ROTC graduates who are not found to be satisfactory.

Dr. Hannah told the Committee that one possibility would have been to excuse ROTC graduates from active duty obligations. He said "this had to be rejected outright because such a solution would work an outrageous injustice upon other young men who were not deferred in order to complete their college training, but were drafted or enlisted for Korea war service."

The Assistant Secretary, making no effort to hide the dilemma caused by the large ROTC graduation classes and the heavy cut in Army manpower, said "the decision . . . was a Hobson's choice at best."

"There are bound to be inequities, misunderstandings, and worse; but we believe it was the best possible solution. No one is to blame for the situation," he emphasized.

"The Services estimated their needs for officers in good faith years ago on the basis of what appeared to be the probable situation. At that time it looked as if we were headed for full mobilization."

"The Services and the students," Dr. Hannah observed, "entered into agreements in good faith on both sides. It is one of those unhappy situations in which some one is sure to get hurt through the fault of no one."

"Vexing Question" Raised By Strength Cut Effects on Promotion Chances

Dr. Hannah paved the way for later budget testimony on promotions by personnel chiefs of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps when he told the House Appropriations Committee that despite cuts in manpower adequate opportunities for career advancement must be assured for officers and non-coms in all the Services.

"I do not pretend to have the answer to this vexing question," said Dr. Hannah, "but I do know that we must find one reasonably soon, or we will compound our difficulties in making military careers more attractive."

He told the Appropriations Committee, which always carefully studies grade structure proposals of the Services in working out the defense budget, that as a result of reduction in strengths there "is the inevitable slowing down of promotions for both officers and enlisted men, with a resulting adverse effect upon morale and esprit."

At the same time, the Assistant Secretary emphasized, "as our equipment has increased in complexity, we have had an ever-increasing requirement for enlisted men in the higher grades."

He related how when the Armed Forces were expanded after Korea, the percentage of men in the top three enlisted grades went from 27.8 to 21.7 last October. But now, as strength contracts, the percentage will rise to 25.3 per cent by 30 June 1954 and to 28.2 per cent a year later.

Dr. Hannah's testimony obviously was aimed at driving home to Congressional leaders the need for assuring enlisted men ample opportunity to get ahead, notwithstanding the percentage increases in the top NCO ranks.

Dr. Hannah asserted that "a problem akin to this exists in the officer corps, as might be expected."

He stated that if the higher grades become full "and there is only a token number of promotions to higher grades, then the career officers and enlisted men become discouraged. They see themselves stymied with little or no chance for further advancement in their profession in the foreseeable future."

One answer: Dr. Hannah suggested the increases in the number holding higher positions may be justified. He quickly added, however, that "there is a limit to the number of bosses one can have in proportion to the number of workers in any organization and still maintain an efficient and effective operation."

Another way to increase promotions, he said, is to authorize more liberal retirements.

Pentagon officials saw in Dr. Hannah's discussion of the promotion problem an awareness at the top echelon of the Defense Department that because of the growing complexity of modern weapons and the need for retention of a skilled "hard core" that Congress will be asked to approve enough funds for a satisfactory promotion schedule which undoubtedly will see more officers and non-coms in higher grades, percentage-wise, than was the case at the height of the post-Korea buildup.

In short: a strong effort will be made to prevent promotions from slipping in direct relation to the strength reductions.

AF Will Get More "Native Sons" O'Seas And Will Save Airmen In The Process

The Air Force will step up its "Native Son" project in the next fiscal year to save money and manpower.

This is disclosed by Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah in a newly-released statement to the House Appropriations Committee.

He reports that the 31,000 foreign nationals now being used to fill jobs overseas formerly held by airmen will be increased to 43,000 by 30 June 1955.

"It is possible," said Dr. Hannah, "to hire a foreign national for a fraction the cost of maintaining one of our airmen overseas. In addition, it relieves us of the housing and recreational problem and means that one less American is required to serve in uniform."

The "Native Son" program, acclaimed by Air Force and Defense Department officials, is credited with a big assist in helping the Air Force to build toward a 115-wing goal by 30 June 1954 with a strength of less than 960,000.

Dr. Hannah told the Appropriations Committee that "Native Son" presents one complicating factor, in that it operates to increase the percentage of airmen in higher grades.

"Quite naturally," he explained, "the foreign national can be fitted into the organization most easily in positions in which comparatively little technical skill is required."

Dr. Hannah made this observation in connection with a discussion of the need to insure adequate promotion opportunities at a time when military strength is being cut and percentages in top grades are going up.

Retirement Rules Switch Hurts Service Security

Military personnel feel that they need more protection against changes in retirement rules, and the Defense Department intends to do something about it, Dr. Hannah reported.

He said that without assurance that rules will not be changed after they enter active duty, Servicemen "have no real security for the future, and find little incentive to make military service their life careers."

The Assistant Secretary previously had sent to the House Armed Services Committee a letter, published in THE JOURNAL of 16 Jan., which advocates optional 20-year retirement for military officers, as provided by permanent legislation.

The new testimony before the Appropriations Committee reflects Pentagon determination to press for restoration of this privilege.

In this connection, Dr. Hannah noted that one way of increasing promotion opportunities is for Congress to permit a return to the system of voluntary retirements now prohibited by the Appropriations Act rider, known originally as the Van Zandt Amendment, but now disavowed by its first sponsor.

Dr. Hannah believes that in the long run national security will be enhanced if, subject to approval of Service Secretaries, officers are permitted to retire after 20 years' service—and certainly after 30 years' active duty.

UNITED STATES ARMY

ARMY PROMOTIONS

The Army will announce this month about 500 temporary officer promotions, according to preliminary estimates as THE JOURNAL went to press.

This may include about 125 to the rank of lieutenant colonel and captain and about 300 to major.

For the last round of promotions, the cut-off dates of rank on the Army Promotion List were 5 April 1949 for majors to lieutenant colonel, 21 Jan. 1948 to major and 4 August 1950 to captain.

BRIG. GEN. R. L. HOWZE, Assistant Commandant of The Armored School, Ft. Knox, Ky., is shown congratulating 1st Lt. Robert H. McCandlish, first honor graduate at the 30 Jan. graduation exercises for the Associate Armor Company Officer Class. The course teaches the principles and techniques used in an armor unit, with particular emphasis on the development of potential company commanders.

Active Army Units Will Train Recruits

The Army, in an effort to conserve manpower, will make increasing use of combat units in the U. S. to assist in training recruits.

This is brought out by Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah in testimony before the House Appropriations Committee.

He said that in the past all new men received 16 weeks of training at Basic Training Centers regardless of whether they were going overseas or not.

Now, all men will continue to receive their first eight weeks at Basic Training Centers. After that, however, some will be sent directly to active units in the U. S. to complete their training.

"This new system," said the Assistant Secretary, "will make increasing use of active units for training purposes, and enable the Army to maintain the training organization at a lower level of activity with a corresponding reduction in training personnel overhead."

Dr. Hannah noted that during fiscal '55, the normal turnover of personnel will mean a loss to the Army of about $20,000 trained men, or almost 50 per cent of its enlisted strength.

"Despite this fact," he said, "the Army expects to have a slightly higher percentage of its total strength in its operating forces at the end of the fiscal year than at the beginning."

"This will be a major accomplishment," commented Dr. Hannah, pointing to the strength cut of about 243,000 men in the next fiscal year.

"Every effort must be made to retain the essential specialists, most of whom are in the higher enlisted grades," he added.

Unusual Record of Engineer-Law Shifts Marks Career of The Army's New JAG

The Army's new Judge Advocate General, Maj. Gen. Eugene M. Caffey, has had a "split personality" during more than 35 years' military service.

Graduated from West Point in 1918, he was commissioned in the Corps of Engineers. He saw service in Chile and Nicaragua and was graduated from the University of Virginia Law School in 1933 with high scholastic honors.

The next year, the Engineer officer transferred to the Judge Advocate General's Department.

Maj. Gen. Caffey

Came WWII, however, and General Caffey went back to the Engineers. He was given command of the 20th Engineer Combat Regiment and went to North Africa in 1942.

He later commanded the 1st Engineer Special Brigade in Sicily and Italy and landed at Utah Beach with the first wave of troops on D-Day. He subsequently commanded the Utah District and Beach District in Normandy Base Section, the Normandy Base Section, and was deputy commander of the Chanor Base Section.

The war over, General Caffey transferred to the JAGD again. In July 1953 he was made Assistant JAG for Civil Law until appointed Acting The Judge Advocate General on 27 Jan., a week before his appointment to the Army's top legal post.

Married to the former Catherine Frances Howell, General Caffey is the father of nine children.

Army Launches Warrant Officer Study; May Cut W.O. Strength, Boost NCO's

A comprehensive inquiry has been launched into the Warrant Officer structure of the Army, which likely will result in a reduced W.O. strength and increased responsibility for many top Non-Coms.

The tipoff to this trend came with last week's announcement that the W.O. job of Unit Administrator, MOS 2123, is going to be abolished and first sergeants be given that responsibility again.

Concurrently, it is reported that an inquiry which may take four or five months is under way to examine every billet currently filled by warrant officers.

The Army wants to find out how many of these jobs can be filled by NCO's.

Simultaneously, the Army is aiming at greater emphasis on technical specialization for Warrant Officers, particularly in view of expanding requirements for such personnel in connection with new weapons, such as guided missiles, antiaircraft artillery and atomic cannon.

What will probably result from the study is a decrease in the overall Warrant Officer strength, now about 14,000 but slated to drop to about 11,000 in the next fiscal year.

However, the increasing need for specialists is expected to insure need for considerable numbers of warrant officers and provide them with adequate opportunities for advancements.

Another field that will undoubtedly be kept open for warrant officer and appointment is that of helicopter pilot.

Army authorities believe that this MOS is one of a number peculiarly suited for Warrant Officer assignment.

Gen. Gavin To Pentagon; Gen. Hodes To Europe

Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens this week announced assignment of Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin to the Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff Operations.

He is expected shortly to be designated the Army's G-3 in place of Maj. Gen. Clyde Eddleman, who will be given a new post after more than three years service at the Pentagon.

At the same time, Secretary Stevens announced that Maj. Gen. Henry I. Hodes, commandant of the Command and General Staff College at Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., will go to Europe next month.

It is believed that General Hodes will take command of the VII Corps, the post which will be vacated by General Gavin.

General Gavin, one of the Army's early paratroopers, will be 47 on 22 March. He is a 1929 graduate of West Point, who served as assistant commander and later as commander of the 82d Airborne Division in WWII.

General Hodes, who will be 55 on 19 March, is a 1920 West Point graduate. He went to Korea in August 1950 with the 7th Infantry Division as assistant commander, later was deputy chief of staff, chief of staff and deputy commander of the Eighth Army before given command of the 24th Infantry Division on 20 Dec. 1951.

He has been head of the Command and General Staff College since January 1952.

Suggestion Box Pays Off

Over half a million dollars will be saved this year in the Third Army area because of the work-efficiency suggestions received through the Third Army Efficiency Awards Program.

Lt. Gen. A. R. Bolling, who made the estimate, said that 844 suggestions for increased efficiency, of which 271 were adopted, were made during 1953. Of the suggestions adopted, 228 were submitted by civilian employees, and 43 by military personnel.

Fifth Army Gets New G-3

Col. Walter B. Finnegan, who recently served with the Joint American Military Mission to Turkey as advisor to the Turkish National Defense College, has been appointed Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, for plans and training at Fifth Army Headquarters, Chicago, Ill.

In his new post, Colonel Finnegan, who succeeds Col. Francis H. Boss, will direct training plans and operations throughout the 13-state Fifth Army Area.

Prior to his Turkish assignment, Colonel Finnegan, a WWII veteran, attended the Armed Forces Staff College and the National War College, and served as Chief of Planning Division with U. S. Forces in Austria.

the U.S. Navy's

Douglas F4D Skyray

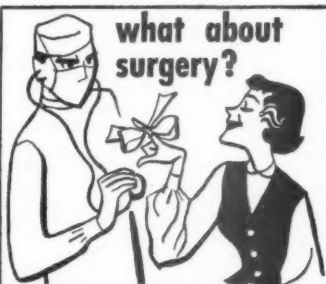

Striking each mile in less than 5 seconds, during four passes at a 3-kilometer course, a Douglas F4D Skyray returned the official world speed record to the United States.

Two weeks later, Skyray blazed into a 100-kilometer course, cracked all records by an even wider margin. Now in production for the Navy, this delta wing jet interceptor adds terrific climb and firepower to its speed—plus the ease of handling needed in carrier landings. The Douglas F4D Skyray has now passed its initial carrier tests, in service will guard our fleets against the fastest of modern jet bombers.

Performance of the Navy's F4D Skyray is another example of Douglas leadership in aviation. Faster and farther with a bigger payload is always the basic rule of Douglas design.

AFMAA covers that, too!

Your membership in the non-profit Armed Forces Medical Aid Association gives your wife and kids up to $300 coverage for surgery by a civilian doctor. And it makes no difference whether it's done in a hospital or not! Of course, that's in addition to all you get for dependents' hospital room, doctors' hospital calls, emergency accident allowance. And maternity is covered.

What you get, in a nutshell, is this: in a civilian hospital—$30 for the first day, $10 a day thereafter; in a government hospital (now, listen!)—$15 for the first day, $5 each additional day; on maternity, you get a flat $75 regardless, unless twins are born or a Caesarean operation is necessary—then it's $150.

Your deposits are very little: $5.50 a month with wife only; $8.00 a month with wife and one or more kids. And each year you get a refund, to boot. Write now to the address below for your free illustrated booklet.

Ground Broken For USMC War Memorial

Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay was the principal speaker yesterday at Arlington, Va., for ground-breaking ceremonies for the giant Marine Corps War Memorial.

General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., Marine Commandant, broke the ground for the $750,000 Memorial, and Maj. Gen. Merritt A. Edson, USMC-Ret., chairman of the Marine Corps Memorial Foundation, presided at the ceremony which was held on the ninth anniversary of the Marine landing on Iwo Jima. The Memorial will be dedicated on 10 Nov., the Marine Corps birthday.

The 35-foot figures now being cast at the Bedi-Rassy Art Foundation in Brooklyn, N. Y., will comprise the largest cast-bronze statue in the world. It will rest on ten-foot-tall stone base of Swedish black granite which will list the place and date of every Marine Corps engagement since the founding of the Corps in 1775. Former Fleet Admiral Chester Nimitz's Tribute to the Marine Corps at Iwo Jima will also be inscribed on the base: "Uncommon Valor was a Common Virtue."

On the other side of the base will be the inscription: "In honor and in memory of the men of the United States Marine Corps who have given their lives to their country since 10 November 1775."

The land surrounding the 78-foot statue will be landscaped, and a large parade ground will stretch between it and the Potomac River.

Nearly all the half-million dollars raised so far for Memorial construction has been donated by Marines and former Marines.

A final drive to raise the remaining $250,000 will be launched shortly.

Gen. Burger Named PIO

Marines Plan Invasion To Use Sub Attack

A unique amphibious operation for Hawaii-based Marines will take place in the Pacific this Spring.

Col. Boeker C. Batterton, USMC, commander of the 1st Provisional Marine Air-Ground Task Force, Kaneohe Bay, T. H., has announced that "after-dark" experts of the task force's attached amphibious reconnaissance group will land from a submarine on "enemy-held" territory. Their mission will be to gain information about "enemy" objectives, troop concentrations and plans and report to intelligence units which will plan a full-scale assault for a later date.

In preparation for the coming operation, Maj. Robert McClean, CO of the reconnaissance unit, has been directing his men in night and day rubber boat landings, submarine escape training in the Monsoon lung course at the Pearl Harbor Submarine Base, and in allied fields.

A number of the men in the unit have had previous submarine attack experience. Some participated in a recent exercise in which Marines from Camp Pendleton made landings on islands in the Alaskan chain.

Navy's new radio "Voice"

dedicated to America's security

WORLD'S MOST POWERFUL MILITARY RADIO TRANSMITTER
A 6-YEAR NAVY-RCA PROJECT!

On Jim Creek, in the State of Washington, stands the world's most powerful military radio transmitter—its giant antenna stretches from mountain peak to mountain peak.

A 6-year project of the Navy and RCA, "Big Jim" was built and installed to provide the Navy, for the first time, with instant communications with naval units everywhere, on the seas and under the seas, on land and in the air.

Speaking at the dedication ceremonies, Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, Chairman of the Board of RCA, said:

"May I express the wish, which I know all in our Armed Services share, that this powerful instrument for transmitting intelligence may add to our national security and to the peace of the world."

The first message flashed by the "Big Jim" transmitter was from Admiral Robert B. Carney, Chief of Naval Operations, to U. S. Navy personnel around the world. He said:

"With this message we forge another link between you and your homeland. With it, we build a new security channel from America to the naval units which form its outer ramparts of defense."

AT DEDICATION CEREMONIES—General Sarnoff operates key to transmit first message, dictated by Admiral Carney, to fleet units around the world.

Management Board In Action

In keeping with the most modern concepts of management, the Southern District, Auditor General, USAF, Ft. Worth, Tex., has organized a "management board" consisting of the entire supervisory auditor staff assigned to the headquarters.

The management board is composed of both military civilian personnel. A civilian is currently chairman.

This new arrangement results in an enlargement of the group which contributes to the development of operating policies, and makes it possible to obtain the benefits of the suggestions and ideas of the people who are closest to actual operations.

Col. Wood, Former Officer Career Chief, at Fourth AF

Col. Frank Lee Wood, Jr., former chief, Officer Career Branch, Headquarters USAF, has assumed duties as Director of Plans for Fourth Air Force, Hamilton AFB, Calif.

Colonel Wood, who lives with his wife, Joan, at 234 Oakwood Dr., Rafael Village, Calif., succeeds Col. Kenneth T. Turner, who was retired from active military service earlier this month.

Prior to his assignment at the Pentagon, Colonel Wood served with the Fifth Air Force in Korea as commanding officer of the 452d Bomb Group and later as Director of Plans and Personnel Planning, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, Tokyo, Japan.

15th AF Wins SAC Trophy For Third Straight Time

Fifteenth Air Force has gained permanent possession of the SAC leadership and morale trophy by winning it for the third consecutive quarter, ending 31 Dec., it is announced by Col. Stephen D. McElroy, SAC director of personnel.

The Fifteenth's win was a close one, with only one and a half points separating it from last place 2d Air Force. The score was: 15th Air Force, 13.93; 8th Air Force, 14.58; 2d Air Force, 15.17.

The competition, which has been conducted by the Strategic Air Command for several years, is based on three important phases of military administration: the ground safety index, the AWOL rate, and the delinquency rate.

In the individual ZI base competition, Offutt AFB, Omaha, Nebr., home of the Strategic Air Command, topped all other bases with an extraordinarily good score in the last two categories. Offutt showed an AWOL rate of only 1.0, and a delinquency rate of only 1.2, for every 1,000 men. MacDill AFB ran a close second to Offutt, with Campbell AFB, Ky., placing third.

In the competition for overseas bases, the 3909th Air Base Group at Greenham Common, England, a 7th Air Division unit, won the certificate for top honors.

A look at the chart covering the last quarter of 1953 shows that the ground safety index at one base in both 2d and 8th Air Force was exceptionally high. Had they been average in this category, 15th Air Force would not have won the trophy.

Air Force Stabilizes Duty Assignments For Airmen With Many Years Of Service

The comprehensive Air Force program to raise the attractiveness of career service for its skilled airmen took a giant stride forward this week with announcement of new plans to stabilize assignments of men with long years of service. Four different airmen categories are affected.

First, the Air Force directed that all airmen returning from overseas who have 26 years or more service will be given assignment at the ZI base of their choice.

They will be permitted to stay there for the remainder of their service unless they volunteer for overseas service. "Deviations from this policy will be approved only by the Director of Military Personnel, Headquarters, USAF," an official message (ALMAJCOM 398/54) declared.

Second, the Air Force said that airmen in the ZI who have 26 years' active military service and have completed at least 18 months service at their present base may submit a request through channels without referral to Headquarters to the Commander of the ZI base of their choice.

Wherever possible, favorable consideration will be given to such requests.

Third, the Air Force message stated that airmen with 20 to 26 years service returning from overseas upon completion of tour may indicate three choices for ZI duty and will be assigned to one of them, in most cases.

Fourth, the Air Force declared that all airmen with 20 years service for retirement purposes who have completed an overseas tour after finishing 17 years service are ineligible for selection to a permanent change of assignment overseas unless they volunteer.

The new program, said the Air Force, "is devised to enhance military service as a career by providing for assignment stability during the final stages of an individual's military service."

The message continued: "It will also encourage airmen presently retiring after 20 years service to remain on duty until they have acquired 30 years service."

NCO Academy at March Will Provide Post-Graduate Training For Hand-Picked Men

(THE JOURNAL 30 Jan. reported plans of General Curtis E. LeMay, commander, to establish NCO Academies in the Strategic Air Command to give high-level training to topnotch enlisted men as part of the overall campaign to raise the prestige of Air Force NonComs. From March AFB, Calif., headquarters of SAC's Fifteenth Air Force, comes the following report of plans to launch an NCO Academy next month).

The first class of hand-picked master sergeants will begin four intensive weeks' "post-graduate-type" advanced training at the Fifteenth Air Force NCO Academy on 29 March. All are senior first sergeants selected for outstanding records and qualifications to attend the 162-hour course.

Already recognized as "the best in the business" by SAC Commanders, the sergeants chosen to be students will receive the ultimate in top level NCO instruction provided for in a curriculum stressing leadership and advanced management principles.

Ten of the 14-man staff have thus far been chosen by a screening of the most qualified personnel with instructor experience whose military and academic backgrounds justify their assignment to a school of this caliber.

The Commandant, Maj. Robt. B. Shea, is a former assistant History professor at the U. S. Military Academy. Currently he is serving as training officer for the 55th Air Refueling Squadron at Forbes AFB, Kans. Major Shea, accompanied by three master sergeants also appointed to the Academy's staff, are now at West Drayton, England, observing the NCO Academy being conducted there by SAC's 7th Air Division.

Capt. Waldo M. Page will be director of training. He has had broad experience with the Training Command at Mather AFB, Calif., and was engaged in observer training with the 93d Bomb Wing, Castle AFB, Calif.

In manning the instructor slots, Fifteenth Air Force was surveyed for the most qualified personnel regardless of current duties. Base sergeant majors, first sergeants, chief clerks, all key men in important positions, were selected for this high priority assignment. The benefit to be derived from their services as instructors of other master sergeants was considered of primary importance.

M/Sgt. Arthur F. Rothschild, the new Academy's Chief instructor, has experience as an instructor in the Technical Training Command and three years as supervisor of General Training at Forbes AFB. He is presently on temporary duty in England with the Commandant, as is M/Sgt. Richard Hicklin, chief of the Leadership and Command Branch. He was first sergeant of the Headquarters Squadron, 93d Air Base Group, Castle AFB, Calif.

Also in England for familiarization with the 7th Air Division's NCO Academy is M/Sgt. William H. Coltrin who will be chief of the Personnel Management Branch. He has been a personnel management instructor at Davis-Monthan AFB, Ariz., for the past three years.

M/Sgt. Lloyd P. Taylor, a graduate of the Dale Carnegie speech course, will also instruct in personnel management subjects. He comes from Stead AFB, where he was primarily a supply records supervisor.

The deputy director of training is M/Sgt. Don F. Glenn, NCOIC of the Base Training Flight at Forbes AFB for three years and formerly a First Sergeant.

M/Sgt. James H. Harris will be chief of the General Subjects Branch. He comes from Castle where he was chief of the Personnel Actions Branch, Base Personnel. He was involved in the early development of the Airman's Career Program. Aiding him will be A/3C John E. Callahan, from Forbes AFB, a graduate of Pennsylvania State Teachers College who has a B.S. degree in Education and practical experience as a speech instructor in Pennsylvania schools.

Strictly military subjects such as leadership, customs and courtesies of the Service, will be the responsibility of M/Sgt. Victor D. Robison, sergeant major at Stead AFB, Nev., who has a broad background as an instructor in this field. The master sergeants all have upwards of 12 years' military service.

Four administrative positions consisting of a technical sergeant, two staff sergeants and one airman first class have still to be selected to complete the complement of the Fifteenth Air Forces' NCO Academy.

Academic Building at Foster Honors Lt. Goodman

The new academic building at Foster AFB, Tex., has been dedicated in honor of 1st Lt. Richard L. Goodman, Jr., the first jet pilot from Victoria, Tex., to be killed during the Korean War.

Prior to his death, Lieutenant Goodman, who was graduated from cadet training at Williams AFB, Ariz., with the highest grade ever awarded at that base, had flown over 100 missions against the enemy. He was killed in Feb. 1953 when his plane exploded in mid-air.

"It is highly fitting that the Academic Building should be dedicated to Lieutenant Goodman in that he himself was a distinguished cadet and pilot," Col. C. D. Sonnkab, base commander, said during the dedicatory ceremonies.

Firms who advertise in the Army, Navy, Air Force Journal know your needs and how to meet them.

"Indispensable Big Stick" Is Gen.'s Tab For SAC

Maj. Gen. John B. Montgomery, USAF, commander of the Eighth Air Force, described the Strategic Air Command recently as "America's indispensable big stick."

In a speech at a ground-breaking ceremony for a new SAC B-47 base on the site of the old Plattsburgh, N. Y., Barracks, General Montgomery declared that air power is the supreme expression of military might and "it would play the dominant and decisive role in any future all-out war."

He said that much of SAC's potential power is due to its "trained readiness" which results from "rigorous minimum training requirements" of SAC personnel. "There is an indomitable and youthful spirit," he said, "which combines imagination and ingenuity with technical and mechanical ability... a spirit and a heritage that, in the final analysis, is America's most powerful weapon."

Arctic Survival Taught To SAC Stalwarts

Survivor instructors of SAC's 3904th Training Squadron at Stead AFB, Nev., are studying Arctic survival training under the auspices of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Four instructors each week are flown to the RCAF survival school in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, where, with an Eskimo guide, they spend a week "living off the land."

The men then are transported to Cambridge Bay, Victoria Island, where they live in igloos, hunt wild game and ice-fish. Temperatures in that area average about 60 degrees below zero.

This training program with the RCAF is expected to continue until early this spring.

AF Given Hero's Portrait

A life-sized portrait of Capt. Colin Kelly, WW II bomber hero, has been given the Air Force by Filipino artist Jose David.

Another portrait of Captain Kelly painted by Mr. David is hanging in the Kelly Theatre at Clark AFB, Pampanga, Philippine Islands.

Mr. David, who has painted many Air Force personalities, declared the portrait was a gift indicating "my interest in the history and traditions of the Air Force, which has been so closely associated with the Philippines during the past 42 years, and is a token of my esteem for American airmen who so gallantly have defended my homeland against aggression."

Captain Kelly was killed in 1941 when his B-17 was hit during a bombing attack by Japanese fighters, caught fire and exploded. He stayed at the controls of the Fortress until his crew bailed out, and so lost his life.

Patient Receives Diploma

Maj. Edward F. Mahoney, USAF, a patient at Walter Reed Army Hospital, received a diploma in Military Science from the University of Maryland recently.

Air Force; Joseph R. Ambrose, USAF, Dean of the College of Military Science, University of Maryland; Kermit H. Gates, MC, USA, Deputy Commander, Walter Reed Army Hospital; and Lt. Col. Herbert G. Interns Get Uniform Allowance

The Air Force Finance Center has determined that officer interns on duty in civilian hospitals are entitled to an initial uniform allowance.

The Center has received information from Headquarters USAF, Institute of Technology, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, that interns on duty at civilian hospitals are required to wear the class A uniform when participating in ceremonial functions, conducting official business at military installations, or traveling in connection with temporary duty.

Pulled for Time — at 1200 hours

Two separate Air Force activities have demonstrated the increase in life and dependability of Allison Turbo-Jet engines.

An Allison-powered Lockheed T-33 Jet Trainer at Webb Air Force Base has flown 1200 hours without even minor repairs to the engine. Line maintenance by the men of the 3561st Maintenance Squadron backed up Allison engine design and manufacture to set this remarkable performance record.

An Allison-powered Lockheed F-80

Shooting Star flew 1200 hours in combat and combat-alert service in Korea without major overhaul. That flight time adds up to more than 600,000 miles under tough combat conditions. The record represents a splendid job on the part of the 6160th Maintenance Squadron at Itazuke AFB, Japan.

Records like these are made by planes and engines—but it's the men behind the planes who make them possible. A hearty salute to the 3561st and 6160th Maintenance Squadrons for these splendid achievements.

"We have accepted as a basic premise that the United States faces a prolonged period of world tension throughout which we will have to be fully prepared for any eventuality."—ASSISTANT DEFENSE SECRETARY JOHN A. HANNAH.

Save the "Hard Core." The opening gun in the Department of Defense's campaign to improve career incentives was sounded this week in the place where it is most needed—the House Appropriations Committee.

Assistant Secretary of Defense John A. Hannah put the case expertly, firmly and in strongest terms. To the men who, more than any other group, have been responsible for the gradual lowering of Service rights and benefits over recent years, Dr. Hannah made it clear that Secretary Wilson, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the top men in all four Services, both military and civilian, consider the problem as "one of the most crucial necessities of the day."

In presenting the case, too, Dr. Hannah talked in terms the Appropriations Committee members understand best:—Economy. By increasing the "hard core" of experienced personnel, he pointed out, it would be possible to cut down the present high rate of turnover and "to reduce substantially the number of dollars and the amount of effort now devoted to training replacements."

The most important needs, Dr. Hannah declared, include (1) improvement of the housing situation, (2) medical care for dependents, (3) protection of the commissaries and post exchanges, (4) protection of retirement rights, and (5) adequate promotion opportunities.

Furthermore, Dr. Hannah promised not only that legislation would be sent to Congress to correct faults in existing law, but also that the Department would take remedial steps within its existing authority.

We must wait and see how far the cooperation of the Appropriations Committee will extend. But the issue has been made clear now, and the Department of Defense is firmly on record.

A Thought for the Retired. Although far from conclusive, the action of the House Ways and Means Committee this week in providing some income tax relief to retired persons, including retired Service personnel, offers considerable hope that there is a growing realization in Congress of the plight of these people.

The provision, offered by Representative Noah M. Mason (R-Ill.), was adopted by the Committee over the active opposition of the Administration by a vote of 18 to 7. An alternate proposal, which the Administration leaders were willing to accept, would have limited tax relief to retired individuals receiving less than $6,000. It was defeated 14 to 11.

As adopted by the Committee, the amendment would permit a retired person to have a special exemption of $1,200 beyond other regular exemptions. This special exemption would apply to any kind of retirement income received by persons over 65 years of age. For those under 65, it would apply only to income from public or private retirement plans, which clearly would include all Service retired personnel.

Under present conditions, the only tax consideration given to retired Service personnel is the exclusion of any part of their retired pay that is based on Service-connected disability. For such persons, the proposed exemption would be reduced by whatever tax-exempt income they now receive, the theory being that the full $1,200 exemption should not be allowed in addition to present special retirement exemptions. However, those who are retired for age, length of service, or causes other than disability, and who now get no special retirement exemptions could claim the full $1,200 exemption.

This is the first indication the legislature has shown toward ameliorating the predicament of retired personnel. Those retired from the Armed Services can draw, under the most favorable conditions, only about half of their active duty pay—that is, 75 per cent of their base pay with complete loss of allowances and any incentive or hazard pay. Under recent laws, many draw considerably less than this top figure.

The Womble Committee, in its December report, recommended that all retired pay be exempt from the income tax. Said the Committee: "Retired personnel must be more adequately recompensed for a life-time devoted to the preservation of our way of life. The present economic situation of many of our retired Service personnel reflects discredit on our government." The Womble Committee also urged that any future pay increases for active duty personnel be applied also to retired personnel. The last pay increase, it was recalled, almost by-passed the retired who were permitted to participate only in the four per cent increase on base pay and were excluded from the 14 per cent increase in allowances because they do not draw any allowances.

The Appropriations Committee's amendment must yet run the gamut of the House of Representatives, the Senate Finance Committee, and the Senate. It can be thrown out by any of these, it can be modified by any of these or by the final conference committee. But there is hope.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—The commander of a Cavalry reconnaissance troop of nearly 200 men which spent four months in front-line action on daring day and night sorties without a single death attributes the record to "good training and excellent leadership by junior officers and non-commissioned officers." He led the troop on missions through Sicily and on the Fifth Army front in Italy. The mechanized Cavalry troop is known in the 3d Infantry Division as the "Snoop Troop."

50 Years Ago—The fact seems to be established at the present time that whenever the new naval stations are in condition for use, the fortifications which are essential will be in charge of the Army.

90 Years Ago—In reply to a resolution of the Senate, the Secretary of War has furnished a list showing the number of officers of each grade belonging to the regular and volunteer service in the Army of the United States, now stationed in and around Washington, and drawing commutation for quarters and fuel, or for either quarters or fuel. Following is a recapitulation: Maj. Generals, 8; Brig. Gen., 18; Colonels, 34; Lt. Cols., 18; Majors, 24; Captains, 126; Lieutenants, 43; Surgeons, 24; Assistant Surgeons, 12; Paymasters, 79; total, 387. Of these, 73 belong to the Regular Army.

Professional EMs

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

For the last several months I have read with interest the eloquent accusations against a government which has "failed to keep its contract." Time and again letters in your columns have bewailed the fact that the rules of the game have been changed since the writers began to play—and that said writers feel cheated. Most of these letters are written on a high moral plane which is indeed inspiring.

But there are others in the game—and lo, those who command them (and who comprise the bulk of the letterwriters) seem loath to take up the cudgels in behalf of their less articulate brethren.

Will there be no letters defending the so-called professional privates? It is popular, of course, to point to the tremendous scientific advances in warfare which demand a high order of intelligence of the modern soldier—but in this writer's humble opinion a rifle or machine gun may still be operated without benefit of diploma.

Certainly, in line with the current, "New Look" some judicious pruning is necessary—this surely could be accomplished by lower draft calls—but why fail to keep a contract entered into in good faith? Art not the rules being changed on these men too?

In all fairness, let us raise the minimum I. Q. requirements for first enlistments—but when a man is already in, let him stay. Soon there will be no privates but those who are encouraged to come in long enough to learn a trade and get out.

Pay and Mathematics

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Replying to a letter under "Readers' Views" entitled "Let's Be Fair," signed "A Voting Taxpayer," I wish to submit the following:

Regarding pay raises for Congress in respect to the Armed Services, here are the circumstances: A motion that consists of more and more that is worth less and less approaches zero for its intrinsic value. Regarding inflated economy, this motion can be stopped only by a factor, known as Sacrifice, inserted in the formulae. This factor of sacrifice will, sooner or later, enter the process anyway, and the longer it is withheld the greater will be its intensity.

The raise in pay and allowances for the Congress was based on inflation by the 24-Man Board. The wisdom of stability seems to have been ignored entirely in spite of the inevitable law of mathematics and its results.

Since the Armed Services make the sacrifice, so should Congress and everyone in Civil and Government status.

What Happened to 5%?

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Once upon a time, the Army, recognizing that some officers deserved temporary promotion ahead of their date-of-rank contemporaries, established the so-called "5% system." This system sought to recognize, reward, and confer increased responsibilities upon, the superior officer, the officer of outstanding performance of duty, the officer whose OERs, whose OEI score, whose entire record reflected his high degree of competence. Although perhaps not perfect, this system was fundamentally a sound one, and some worthy officers were promoted under its criteria, but half-way through the game, the Army changed the playing rules, as has been done so often in recent years, and abolished the 5% promotions.

The net result is no more nor less than this: Captain A, whose OEI score is one point less than Captain B's, or whose name was next below Captain B's on the recommended list, and who would unquestionably have been selected on the very next 5%-list, is no longer even eligible for consideration, under the "new look" rules, irrespective of how conscientiously or how superbly he performs. This is what might loosely be termed a great morale-incentive.

Still, it could be worse: after literally thousands of mediocre officers are considered and, in most cases, promoted, during the next several years Captain A will be eligible for consideration—provided the budget has not run out by that time. And, oh yes, of course, his old comrade-contemporary, Captain B, of equally outstanding record in the old days, now a Major, will be coming up for Lt. Colonel, for, by that time, the rules will have changed again. What price devotion to duty?

SEC NAV ANDERSON has been asked to explain the award of a contract for three destroyers to the highest bidder. Representative William E. Hess (R-Ohio), Chairman of a House Armed Services subcommittee, who made the request, said he cannot understand why bids were asked for at all if they were to be disregarded. The contract (for $53,022,000) went to the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co., Quincy, Mass., although a low bid of $46,476,960 was made by the Bath Iron Works, Bath, Maine. Secretary Anderson said it was necessary to make an exception to the Navy's usual policy in order to retain the mobilization potential of the Quincy Yard and help check the unemployment trend there. Said Mr. Hess: "The biggest distress area right now is the taxpayer's pocketbook; and I don't believe we ought to be tossing around $6.5 million bonuses when we have good competitive bids." He said he isn't satisfied with the Secretary's statement and will have to be given "more than just a plausible explanation of why a $6.5 million premium is being paid."

A TENTH ASST SEC DEF would be added to the Pentagon staff under the terms of a bill introduced by Senators Burnet R. Maybank (D-SC) and Edward Martin (R-Pa). They propose the creation of an Asst. Secretary for the Reserves and National Guard.

TO HONOR the late Maj. Gen. Earl T. Ricks, ANG, Representative W. F. Norrell (D-Ark), has suggested that the Air Force base now under construction at Jacksonville, Ark., be named in his memory. A former National Commander of the Air National Guard, General Ricks died last month.

THE SOVIET UNION has set up a new military district in northeast Siberia which "could form a direct threat to the American Continent," according to Senator Mike Mansfield (D-Mont). Headquarters for the new district, he said, have been established in Anadyr with Lt. Gen. Sergi M. Shtemenko in charge. According to Senator Mansfield's information, troops located in the district include at least nine Red army divisions with four paratroop brigades, and between 5,000 and 6,000 aircraft composed of C-47's, B-29's, MiG-15 jet fighters and TU-4 bombers.

MEMBERSHIP on the National Security Council is proposed for the Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission by Representative W. Sterling Cole (R-NY). He notes that "atomic energy is now at the very heart of all our plans for military preparedness" and the AEC Chairman should be a "full-fledged and permanent member" of the NSC. At present, the AEC Chairman, Rear Adm. Lewis Strauss, attends NSC meetings by invitation.

MERCHANT SHIPBUILDING in the U. S. is sadly lagging according to a Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce subcommittee which has disclosed that "no orders for oceangoing vessels in excess of 1,000 gross tons were placed in United States shipyards in 1953 and none are in prospect." The subcommittee also reported that the country is "worse off, by far" than it was prior to WWII "in the category of passenger ships" capable of conversion to troop transports, and added that some way must be found to proceed with a program of passenger vessel construction. "About 80 per cent of the active merchant marine was built during three or four war years, is 10 or more years old, and will become obsolete in a block during 1962-65," the report notes.

RUSSIA'S AIR POTENTIAL "may be superior to ours," according to Senator Stuart S. Symington (D-Mo). Taking cognizance of recently-published photos of two new Russian bombers, the former Air Force Secretary said if the photographs are correct "and I am assured that they are correct—then it is obvious that what some of us have feared for a long time has come to pass, namely, the Soviets are making further inroads on the air superiority of the United States in this air-atomic age."

SELECTION OF AN AF Academy site is going to be no easy matter according to AF Secretary Talbott. He told the Senate Armed Services Committee this week that he will be criticized no matter what decision is made. "I can't win," Mr. Talbott said. Under questioning by the Senators as to which sites he likes, the AF Secretary mentioned one near St. Louis, another between Louisville and Cincinnati, two in Texas, one in Michigan, one in California, one in Colorado and one in Indiana.

ANOTHER SKIRMISH developed this week over the Defense Department's "new look," as the result of Admiral Robert B. Carney's speech at the Naval War College. A number of Senators said the remarks made by the Chief of Naval Operations are "inconsistent" with the administration's policy as outlined by Secretary of State Dulles. In a letter to Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass), Admiral Carney said his address dealt with the Navy's role "in possible future war." He said "my personal views are not at variance with approved national strategy and policy."

The Berlin Conference Results— COMMENT ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

THE BIG FOUR conference in Berlin was satisfying to us in one respect, and only one which readily meets the eye. It failed signally to bring solutions for German unification or for Austrian liberation, which incurable optimists had hoped might emerge from three weeks of talk with a Muscovite representative who never intended to accept a conceivable solution. But the failure this time was patently attributable to Moscow's obduracy and to nothing else, and this undeniable fact must have impressed itself upon the world public, to the undoubted injury, in world esteem, of a Kremlin administration which is either more stupid than its predecessor or much less fortunate in the rise and fall of events. It is true that the breaks have not been in Russia's favor for some time. The working-class risings in East Germany and Poland last summer, vain as they were in desired achievements, did Red prestige great damage, and in trying to overcome the injury then suffered Moscow has moved clumsily; far from undoing the damage done a few months ago, the local Red administrations have compounded it; they have had to recognize that popular discontent is greater, not less, and that new risings are prevented only by the presence of Red troops in increased strength and by popular knowledge of how savage Russian repression can be. Crops, falling off for years through the inefficiency of farm-collectivization, have provided insufficient amounts this year to allow for both seed and food-consumption until harvest, and a real food shortage can be expected in East Germany in particular by April; what hunger will lead people to do is guesswork. Factory work under Red management is of poorer quality than formerly, and the distribution of inferior goods has not soothed popular irritation. The background in the satellite states, that is, against which the Berlin conference has been silhouetted, is already worrying to Moscow.

MOSCOW in this situation, which even the blindest member of the Presidium must have discerned, apparently was willing to enter a big gamble in holding the Big Four conference, hoping so to divide and embarrass the three Western representatives as to divert attention from Russia's gross internal blunders. It proved a very bad gamble. And it is agreeable to note that Molotov, whose nimbleness on more than one occasion has caught our Western diplomats off balance, this time suffered both from a bad program and from, one would say, either stiffened joints or weakened muscles. The simple fact is that he was rebuffed by France—whose representative Molotov had confidently expected to scare out of the Western alliance—and by Britain alike. We cannot be charged with excessive American enthusiasm if we hold that Secretary of State Dulles achieved a series of resounding triumphs. He was firm where firmness was called for, and agile when agility was needed, and in both respects he enjoyed from the start the loyal support of both Mr. Eden and M. Bidault, a very important thing in such times.

THE AUSTRIAN TREATY discussion this past week afforded an example of the West's quickness of decision, to the great discomfiture of Mr. Molotov. It will be recalled that unhappy Austria has been working for years to get a treaty; that seven years ago a treaty form was drawn up so soundly that eventually even Russia consented to 47 of the 52 articles. This time, after a long pause, Molotov expressed his willingness to approve the treaty if his amendments to those last five articles should be accepted, and thereupon presented the five amendments. They were harsh and unfair to Austria, but Herr Leopold Figl, Austria's foreign minister, agreed even to them—and thereupon the three Western representatives dumfounded Molotov (who was prepared for a long argument) by instantly stating their own acceptance of the terms. Now the one thing which Russia does not wish is a settlement of Austria's affairs, or Germany's either, and the agitated Molotov had to exclaim that there were still other conditions which he had failed to present. One was that while, as stated in the treaty text, Russia of course was eager for Austria's "full independence," Russia must insist on the continuing right to maintain occupation troops there. Molotov thereupon established before the world his own nation's blundering determination to keep Austria in harness. Herr Figl with great dignity refused the Russian second-thought conditions and was fully supported by his cabinet. Mr. Dulles icily put in the record that this was "another illustration of the Soviet Union's unwillingness actually to restore genuine freedom in any area where it has once gotten its grip." The Kremlin appears to have demonstrated, with regard to Germany and Austria alike, its ruthlessness and its contempt for its own promises, and to have suffered the sharpest diplomatic defeat in years. The Berlin Conference from our viewpoint has had its good points.

INDO-CHINA remains active in the news, particularly with regard to the American aid program, which President Eisenhower has done a great deal to clarify. In this the French have helped, for they have made it plain that one of the least of their desires is American combat participation—or even that of the ROK division tendered by Syngman Rhee. For nothing would be likelier to persuade Red China to pour in massive reinforcements for the Vietminh. What the French need is American materiel, and further training of the Vietnam elements, and both seem to be assured; we are presently giving the equivalent of $750,000,000 a year, plus perhaps $25,000,000 in economic assistance to the three separate states of the Indo-China union. We will get more guidance on French hopes for the future after Rene Pleven, Minister of National Defense, has completed his current inquiry in the Far East; there is hope that he will return by way of Washington, but his government may, rather, prefer to have its own contact with him first. France has some large decisions to make, and it must be remembered that it is the attention which she is currently compelled to keep giving to Indo-China operations that gravely hampers France in playing her natural full role in Europe. Much of France's dislike for the European Army plan springs from her present inability to participate in it with all her forces.

THE NETHERLANDS GOVERNMENT has agreed to support the plan for admitting U. S. Air Force tactical units to Netherlands air bases, for NATO purposes, on the same basis which prevails in the United Kingdom, France, and West Germany. It is gratifying to report that the Socialist party offers no opposition, although it is the Socialists of Norway and Denmark who have blocked similar WHAT'S IT WORTH to leave the Service? Defense officials estimate that the value of benefits which can be obtained by a Serviceman only if he leaves active duty—home loan, education assistance, mustering-out pay, etc.—can total as much as $5000. This compares with a maximum reenlistment bonus of $360. As a consequence, a strong effort will be made this year to close the gap, either by obtaining G.I. Benefits for Servicemen or raising the Re-Up Bonus . . . or both.

THE WIDE PUBLICITY given the assignment of several hundred Air Force technicians to Indo-China overlooked the fact that for a number of them the action meant a substantial loss in "take-home" pay. The airmen who were sent to Indo-China from Korea will lose their income tax exemption. Armed Forces personnel in Korea continue to receive a $200 monthly exemption. That means, with few exceptions, enlisted personnel pay no income taxes for the months they are on duty in Korea.

AIRLINE HOSTESSES are up in arms over prospects of dismissal from flying service after reaching the age of 32. The Military Air Transport Service is not likely, however, to be involved in such a petticoat row. Its Flight Traffic Specialists, the official MOS designation for women assigned to passenger aircraft, must be at least 21 years of age, but there's no maximum. Officials who understandably preferred anonymity said that a major reason for "grounding" the Flight Traffic Specialists is weight (maximum 130) and not age. There are about 85 WAFs assigned to such duty.

TWO AIRBORNE SUBORDINATES of Gen. Ridgway, Army CofS, have been summoned to Washington for key assignments in the last two weeks. Maj. Gen. Lemuel Mathewson, artillery officer of the XVIII Corps, commanded by Gen. Ridgway, last week was named Director of the Joint Staff, JCS, from assignment as ComZ CG in Europe. This week, Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin, who took command of the 82d Airborne Division when Gen. Ridgway moved up to the XVIII Corps post, was reassigned from command of the VII Corps in Germany to be G-3. The JCS post could well mean a third star for Gen. Mathewson.

IT'S ALSO INTERESTING to note that Maj. Gen. Henry I. Hodes, ordered to Europe from assignment as head of the Command and General Staff College at Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., and a likely successor to Gen. Gavin as VII Corps CG, was deputy chief of staff of the Eighth Army in Korea when Gen. Ridgway was its commander.

EARLY ADJOURNMENT of Congress is in the bag, if the stepped-up pace of the House Appropriations Committee is any indication. Normally, this group does not get under full steam until the Spring, but already is going strong, with detailed Service testimony due to be under way next week. Consequently, it can be expected that the Defense Dept. will speedily send to the Capitol its "must" legislation, for bills that tarry will be shoved aside in the rush for adjournment in an election year. After the defense budget is voted, it's a tough job to keep the politicians in Washington.

SEVEN WEEKS additional effective service is being obtained from Army recruits. It used to take 39 weeks to examine, process, train, ship and return for discharge each new soldier. Now, the time has been cut to 32 weeks.

ADOPTION OF A NEW ARMY UNIFORM, now seen a good probability, will result in a drive to eliminate many Special-type uniforms now worn by bands, military police, escorts and honor guards. There's a strong feeling that one Army uniform should be worn by all, and that the fancy get-ups should be put in mothballs.

MORE "NATIVE SONS" are going to join the Air Force. These are foreign nationals used to replace airmen overseas. At the present time, the AF has about 31,000, but this figure will be boosted to 43,000 during the next fiscal year.

CONGRESSIONAL SEARCHLIGHTS may be trained on the Navy-operated Military Sea Transportation Service during the present session of Congress in an attempt to channel more military ocean transportation into the hands of private shippers. MSTs has been praised highly for its efficient and economical operations but many Congressmen feel the Government should get out of the field of merchant shipping.

HOPE PERSISTS in the Armed Forces that men and women in uniform will not be neglected if the Administration lends support to plans which will raise the income of civilian employees of the Federal Government. The Postmaster General has presented a proposal which, although not providing an across-the-board pay hike, would mean added take-home pay for many thousand postal employees.

THE STRENGTH CUTBACKS are certain to mean more rigorous selections and higher pass-overs for officers compared with the situation during the fighting in Korea. Forced attrition will play an increasingly important role in making promotion opportunities.

H. STRUVE HENSEL, nominated by President Eisenhower this week to be Assistant Defense Secretary for International Security, has had a varied background of defense assignments in Washington. He was made General Counsel of the Navy in 1944 after organizing the Procurement Legal Division in 1941. From January 1945 to March 1946 he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy. Then, after serving as a Special Assistant to Defense Secretary Wilson and as an advisor to the Rockefeller Commission on Defense Reorganization, he was made Defense Dept. General Counsel in July 1953.

GEN. RIDGWAY'S REPORT on new Army weapons (page 750) is an opening shot in the Army's campaign to get over to the American public the fact that it is making dynamic changes in strategy and tactics as a result of new weapons. Many in the Army are concerned that during the "New Look" talk, an impression has gained wide currency that the Army was not keeping up to date. Gen. Ridgway and his associates are going to do everything possible to counteract that impression. The forthcoming atomic maneuver FLASHBURN at Ft. Bragg, N. C., will provide the Army with a formidable "enlightenment" device.

ASST. SECDEF HANNAH, although testifying on the AF Academy Bill, said this week that steps need to be taken to strengthen the other Service Academies. He said he would present specific proposals at a later time. One of them is certain to be a pay increase for cadets and midshipmen.

Many Big Moments begin with a Familiar Ring

Often it's a call you've hoped for and waited for. From someone dear or about something especially important to you. Then suddenly there's a familiar ring. And everything's just wonderful!

Many's the time you would have paid the telephone bill for a whole month—and more—for that one call.

Whenever the telephone rings, it's a reminder of its double value. It keeps you in touch with other people. Helps other people keep in touch with you. Some days the calls you get are even more important than those you make.

Yet the cost of this two-way service is small. Less than a penny an hour for the average family.

BELL TELEPHONE SYSTEM

"Jack phoned to ask me to the dance"

"A prospect telephoned to give me a big order"

"Bob, Jr., called to tell me it's a boy"

"My Scoutmaster phoned about a camping trip"

Vice Adm. Wright Named Supreme Commander

Vice Admiral Jerauld Wright, USN, this week was appointed Supreme Allied Commander, Atlantic, by the North Atlantic Council which is meeting in Paris. He will have four-star rank.

He will relieve Admiral Lynde D. McCormick, USN, on 12 April. Admiral McCormick will replace Admiral Richard Conolly, who recently retired, as President of the Naval War College at Newport, R. I., the Navy said.

At the same time, President Eisenhower nominated Admiral Wright to serve concurrently as Commander-in-Chief of the U. S. Atlantic Fleet and as Commander-in-Chief of the U. S. Atlantic Command.

Admiral Wright, a 1917 graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy, is the son of General William M. Wright, USA-Ret.

During WWI, he served on various ships on convoy and patrol duty. In 1924, he reported for duty on the presidential yacht, USS Mayflower, with additional duty as Naval Aide to President Calvin Coolidge. From July 1926, until July 1929, he served in the USS Maryland. He was aboard the battleship when President Herbert Hoover and his party made a good-will tour to South American ports in 1928. From August 1929 until August 1931, he was Naval Aide to President Hoover.

He was Executive Officer of the USS Mississippi when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor.

In the Spring of 1942, he served at Headquarters, Commander in Chief, U. S. Fleet, Navy Dept., and then reported for duty on the staff of the Commander Naval Forces, Europe, and later on the staff of the Commander, AEF, General Dwight D. Eisenhower. He was the Navy member of the expedition under General Mark Clark, USA, which landed in North Africa two weeks before the invasion.

Admiral Wright was in temporary command of the British submarine HMS Seraph, which evacuated General Henri Gerard and a party of staff officers from the village of La Fosette in Southern France.

On 15 Dec. 1943, he assumed command of the cruiser Santa Fe, operating in the Pacific with the Fast Carrier Task Forces under Admiral William F. Halsey, USN. Later he was appointed Commander of Amphibious Group 5.

In 1950, he was Deputy to the U. S. Representative on the Standing Group of NATO.

He was named Deputy Commander in Chief, U. S. Naval Forces, Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean, in 1952, and in the same year he relieved Admiral Carney as Commander in Chief, the post which he has held until his appointment this week.

Col. Robinson Named To Head Veterinary Science Division

Col. Charles E. Robinson has been named chief of the newly-created Veterinary Science Division of the Air Force School of Aviation Medicine, Randolph AFB, Tex. The new division was created to expand the school's training and research in veterinary procedures.

Colonel Robinson entered the Army in 1937 and was assigned to Ft. Des Moines, Ia., as assistant station veterinarian. During WW II, he was sent to North Africa with the Ninth Air Service Command, and later was assigned to the Surgeon of the Ninth Air Force in Europe.

For a year after the war, Colonel Robinson returned to civilian life, but rejoined the Air Force in the fall of 1946 and was assigned to the Air Materiel Command veterinarian at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio. In 1950 he was appointed first AFROTC instructor in veterinary medicine at Ohio State University, a post which he held until he was appointed to the USAF School of Aviation Medicine at Randolph Field, Tex.

General Bennett Cited

Brig. Gen. John M. Bennett, jr., USAFR, former president of the Air Reserve Association, last week was awarded the Legion of Merit by Assistant Secretary of the Air Force, H. Lee White in a Pentagon ceremony.

General Bennett was cited for "exceptionally meritorious conduct" during the five-year period ending 30 June 1953 in which he served first as a member and subsequently as chairman of the Air Staff Committee on Reserve Policy and the Air Staff Committee on National Guard and Reserve Policy.

Lt. Col. Trout Reassigned

Lt. Col. Kenneth E. Trout, former Communications Officer with the 18th Fighter Bomber Wing, Korea, has assumed duties as Director of Communications at Headquarters, Fourth Air Force, Hamilton AFB, Calif.

A veteran of WWII, Colonel Trout has been assigned during the postwar years as Communications Air Inspector at Headquarters Tactical Air Command, Langley Field, Va., and as Wing Communications Officer with the 307th Bomb Wing in England, and later at MacDill Field, Tampa, Fla.

Gen. Clinch to Korea

Brig. Gen. William J. Clinch, USAF, Director of Personnel and Support Operations, Air Materiel Command, has been appointed Deputy Commander of the Fifth Air Force in Korea.

He will be succeeded at AMC, where he has been assigned since 1951, by Brig. Gen. Alvord V. P. Anderson, jr., USAF, presently Deputy Commander of the Warner Robins AMA and Robins AFB, Ga.

AF Returns Acres

The Air Force is turning back to its owners some 10,000 acres of land used during WWII for bombing and gunnery ranges.

The land, which will now be used for agricultural or grazing purposes, has been cleared of explosives and declared excess to the Department of Defense.

The bulk of the land which the Air Force is returning is at Rapid City, S. D., but 320 acres are located at Pendleton, Ore.

Meanwhile, the Air Force announced that it is clearing of explosives some 48,000 acres of land at Moses Lake, Wash., and expects to be finished with this task by 15 May.

Air Materiel Command estimates that 500 tons of scrap metal, valued at $25,000, will be recovered from the Moses Lake range.

ETO Operational Readiness

Col. Kenneth C. Diehl, former Deputy for Training of Operational Readiness, Air Research and Development Command, Headquarters, Baltimore, Md., has been assigned to Brussels, Belgium where he will set up an Operational Readiness Program for the European Theatre.

The purpose of the program will be to maintain a close relationship between all USAF operational units in Europe and ARDC Headquarters in this country.

Colonel Diehl, personal representative of Lt. Gen. Donald L. Putt, ARDC Commander, will serve as a liaison in keeping ARDC informed on weapons systems development, programs and progress. This will enable ARDC to maintain a closer working relationship with the people who use our research and development knowledge and equipment, and also to maintain a closer liaison with the field operators who are responsible for the quality of Air Force equipment and techniques.

The establishment of an European office will complete the world-wide Operational Readiness coverage for the Air Research and Development Command. An ORP activity was established earlier in the Far East.

New Purdue AFROTC Chief

Col. Harold T. Babb, professor of Air Science and Tactics at Purdue University, has been appointed commander of the AFROTC there to replace the late Col.

Edward W. Maschmeyer. Since Colonel Maschmeyer's death, Lt. Col. Clarence L. Beaudrot has been serving as acting commander.

A WW II veteran, Colonel Babb has spent the post-war years in Italy, Offutt AFB, Nebr., and in Korea where he was the senior tactical advisor to the Republic of Korea Air Force. He was base commander of Kangnung AFB, Korea, in September 1953 when the Polish interpreter, Jan Hajdukiewicz, sought political asylum with American troops.

New Iceland Provost

Maj. James C. Caldwell has assumed the duties of Air Provost Marshal at Keflavik Airport, Iceland. He was previously chief of the Base Security Division at Brookley AFB, Ala.

The Caldwells have one son, Jay. Mrs. Caldwell is residing at 671 University Avenue S.W. in Atlanta, Ga.

Gen. Rampy Transferred

Maj. Gen. Thomas R. Rampy, USAF, Auditor General, and part of his staff will be transferred 1 March from Philadelphia, Pa., to Washington, D. C.

Gen. Ridgway Tells Nation Of Army's Progress in Modern Weapons' Use

GENERAL Matthew B. Ridgway, Army Chief of Staff, this week discussed publicly the capabilities of two new weapons in the Army's arsenal—the "Honest John" rocket and "Corporal" missile.

Although the Chief of Staff did not identify the weapons as such there was no question that he was talking about these two during an address at Palm Beach, Fla., on 16 Feb.

THE JOURNAL publishes herewith the complete excerpt from General Ridgway's remarks relating to new weapons.

In his speech, he emphasized that in battles of the future, "small unit actions will become more typical and small unit leaders will be called upon to a greater degree than ever before to make tactical decisions on the battlefield."

During his recent speeches, General Ridgway has stressed repeatedly the need for the Army to have outstanding junior officers and Non-Coms to command small units in battle, employing latest-type weapons with great firepower.

Here is his report on new Army weapons, as made at Palm Beach this week:

To achieve greater firepower, deadlier and more accurate weapons are now being placed in the hands of our troops. In Europe, the new 280mm cannon battalions have joined our Army units there. The weapon offers to our Army all the advantage inherent in artillery, itself an integral part of our fire-power complex. Artillery fires can be delivered very quickly upon a target of fleeting opportunity.

They are more accurate than tactical air and are available around the clock in all conditions of weather and visibility. This last point is particularly important, for we can be sure that the enemy will not mass, if he can avoid it, when he may be exposed to our weapons. Certainly he will not remain massed for a long period of time.

Thus, our Army's increasing capabilities provide a powerful deterrent to the mass tactics of any potential enemy whose superiority lies largely in manpower.

Rockets and Missiles

To implement the power of our artillery still further, we are exploiting the capabilities of rockets and guided missiles. Guided missiles will give the Army the ability to fire with accuracy deep into enemy territory from well behind our own advance forces, and rockets offer mobility, accuracy, and heavy firepower at relatively cheap cost.

In the large-scale field maneuvers being held this year, two of our latest weapons will be incorporated into the exercises.

One is this country's first successful adaptation of the rocket principle to a tactical missile with a medium-to-long range capability. It is used in a manner similar to artillery, and has the range characteristics of our present heavy artillery.

Its great advantage is that its launcher can be put into position much more quickly than conventional artillery and can deliver a payload of explosive on the target equivalent to hundreds of rounds of artillery shells. Being a free rocket, it is simple in design and simple to operate, since standard artillery fire control is used by its crew. It thus offers the advantages of high mobility and great firepower, so desirable in modern weapons, and is well adapted to use in rapidly moving situations.

To extend the Army's firepower capabilities beyond the range of this weapon and of the 280mm cannon, too, the Army has a guided missile which is now being issued to Army units for tactical use. It attains a supersonic speed and is guided to the target throughout its flight.

Long-Range Weapons

Having a range of more than fifty miles from the point of discharge to the target, it poses a threat to the enemy's installations far beyond the range of conventional Army weapons.

These weapons illustrate the trend toward greater firepower on the battlefield which the Army is presently achieving as the result of its research and development program.

Tanks and armored vehicles can be expected to play a highly important role on any future battlefield because they are well suited to warfare characterized by quick concentration and dispersion, high mobility, and firepower. Fortunately, our Army has a complete new series of tanks which have gone into production since the outbreak of the Korean war. These tanks feature stouter armor, greater speed, and an improved fire control system which gives greater probability of first-round hits.

To accompany the tanks to the objective, armored personnel carriers are in production. These have already seen action in Korea, and have proved of great value in protecting troops against small arms fire and shell fragments, while enabling them to maneuver rapidly upon the battlefield.

Meanwhile, the air has provided a new dimension for the movement of troops and supplies.

One of the greatest single improvements in Army aviation is represented by the cargo helicopter. In Korea, helicopter companies have supplied front-line units ranging in size from battalions to divisions for periods of from three to seven days. During these periods they transported all the food, ammunition, and other supplies required to sustain a combat force in the front line.

We can anticipate this to be a normal function of these companies in any future war as the depth of the battlefield increases. And in the speedy evacuation of the wounded, they have more than justified their existence and have been responsible for the saving of lives on a large scale.

Its aircraft—both light, fixed wing and helicopters—thus greatly increase the capabilities of our Army. To the commander they offer greater ability to reconnoiter his front, to confer quickly with his commanders and to be on the critical spot at the crises of action.

For quickly and accurately laying artillery fire and for locating and identifying targets behind the enemy lines they are invaluable, and they also facilitate the laying of communications wires in difficult terrain.

Greater dispersion requires highly reliable communications—both radio and wire—in tactical organizations. The need for mobility dictated the trend to lighter communications equipment of greater range and power with which our Army is now equipped.

Of about 350 major Signal Corps items now in general procurement, 236 have been newly developed since World War II, or represent such improvements on World War II items as to be, in effect, new items.

Maximum Inter-Com

In the development of these items, the need for maximum inter-communication has received full consideration, so that radio sets of all types and sizes have a maximum capability of communicating with each other. Thus the soldier on foot, the tanker, and the Army aviator are more capable of communicating with each other and thus of operating more effectively in combat.

Improved field wire which is now in use is lighter and has a greater transmission range than comparable World War II equipment. We can, in fact, now lay our wire across difficult country by our own light aircraft. Last but not least, this wire is less costly. In sum, our communications facilities are keeping pace with developments in the various other fields of materiel.

To the vital role of protecting industrial and population centers from attack, the Army has devoted special attention, for the antiaircraft defense of the United States against air attack is one of the Army's major responsibilities.

A great stride forward is the development of the first operational antiaircraft guided missile, the NIKE. The formation of NIKE battalions and the movement of these battalions to on-site locations in the United States is showing steady progress.

The NIKE can track and engage aircraft flying at supersonic speeds and can achieve a very high incidence of kills, and it can reach out to ranges and altitudes well beyond the maximum capabilities of standard antiaircraft guns.

Low-Flying Planes

To cope with the menace of high-speed low-flying planes, another antiaircraft weapon has been developed and is now in use by our troops: the Skysweeper cannon. It is electronically controlled and tracks the target automatically while firing 75mm shells at a rapid rate. It is a self contained unit, with every essential component carried on the same carriage.

We are placing increased emphasis on the problem of engaging low-flying planes, as the antiaircraft problem is very difficult with respect to planes that come in fast and low and, if possible, undetected, even though this has inherent disadvantages to the attacking planes, which normally have found bombing at high altitudes much more remunerative.

We are constantly striving to achieve added capabilities, to enlarge our mobility and striking power, and to adapt our techniques and organization for the application of this increasing potential to the changing conditions of warfare. Our goal is to maintain our technological superiority in every line of military endeavor within the Army's sphere.

Carrying Strap May Ease Combat Soldier's Load

A universal carrying strap for lightening the combat soldier's load will be put through a final testing stage this Summer at Ft. Benning, Ga.

The strap, invented by Maj. Richard R. Hallock, executive officer of the 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team's Second Battalion at Ft. Benning, may eliminate much of the carrying equipment now necessary. It could be used to carry component parts of heavy weapons, large rounds of ammunition and much of the cumbersome equipment needed in the front lines.

Preliminary tests of the strap were made by the Army Field Forces Board No. 3, and further tests were made by the Eighth Army in Korea. Favorable reports were submitted by both, and if the experts decide after additional tests this Summer that the strap is feasible, it will be adopted for Army-wide use.

Major Hallock was graduated from Infantry Officers Candidate School at Ft. Benning in 1943 and later took airborne training. He came to Ft. Benning for his present tour from Korea where he was commander of the First Battalion, 32d Infantry Regiment, Seventh Division.

Adm. Carney Dissects "New Look" Concept

Admiral Robert B. Carney dissected the "new look" this week in a speech at the Naval War College in which he said "something new and something old are both needed in the military locker."

The Chief of Naval Operations, discussing the role of the Navy in future war, said an all-out conflict might see "a limited use of atomic weapons," or it might see "a nuclear stalemate with both sides refraining for fear of retaliation."

Rely on Past Methods

Confronted with such uncertainty, he said, "I see no alternative but to hedge our strategic bets, ready to rush into the future, but also prepared to meet, and rely on, the methods of the recent past."

Admiral Carney said "if we are honest with ourselves, we will acknowledge that there are big wars, little wars, general wars, localized wars, Marquis of Queensbury wars, and savage ruthless wars; atomic wars and, perhaps, nonatomic wars."

He added, "we cannot say, for sure, just what kind of conflict the next international crisis might precipitate. If the answer is atoms, that is one thing. Were the criterion to be no atoms, we are militarily right back where we started."

End on Ground

The Navy's top military leader said the next war "might start with an aggressive act of sufficient magnitude to warrant prompt, large-scale retaliation" followed by "a period when both sides would pick up the pieces, dust off the atomic residue, and make a reestimate of the situation which might well result in both sides settling down to a struggle chiefly involving the old conventional weapons."

Regardless of how the war is fought, he said he is convinced "it will end on the ground, politically and economically, even if not by frontal assault."

The CNO said also that he "cannot conceive of a major military campaign for the future that would not involve full participation of all the services, and all of the capabilities of each, all closely interwoven in the fabric of total national power."

SigC Communicates New Anniversary

The Army Signal Corps has communicated word that this year it will be almost four years older than last year.

Here's how the Signal Corps lengthened its longevity lines. Heretofore, the anniversary date had been counted from 3 March 1863, the date when Congress authorized creation of the Signal Corps as an integral unit of the Army.

Now, however, the Chief of Military History has crossed the anniversary wires. He has approved setting the date as of 21 June 1860 when Congress O.K.'d appointment of the first Signal Officer.

Signal Corps units have been alerted to disregard previous plans for anniversary celebrations on 3 March. Instead, the Corps will commemorate its newly acquired age on 21 June.

Close Belvoir OCS, Cut Lt. Output

The Army will close a third of its Officer Candidate Schools on 30 June, when the Engineer OCS at Ft. Belvoir, Va., is shut down.

This will leave only two OCS facilities in operation—at the Infantry Center, Ft. Benning, Ga., and the Artillery Center, Ft. Sill, Okla.

Army authorities said this week that the combined output of the two schools would be 1200 per year—700 at Benning and 500 at Sill.

This compares with a rate of 16,000 per year achieved during the fighting in Korea.

It can be reported that despite the heavy cutback in Army strength and the resulting problems created by surplus numbers of officers, every effort will be made to keep the OCS program from being completely phased-out.

First, Army leaders are anxious to provide advancement opportunities into officer ranks for outstanding enlisted men who desire to apply for OCS training.

Second, operation of the schools will insure keeping up the "know-how" for OCS training in event an emergency should require ballooning the program again.

Lt. Gen. Jenkins Retires

Lt. Gen. Reuben E. Jenkins, USA, who was 58 on 14 Feb., will retire on 28 Feb. after more than 36 years' service.

A WWI Georgia National Guard enlistee, he was appointed in the Regular Army in 1920 after two years' service as a lieutenant of Infantry.

General Jenkins was sent to Greece in April 1948 as assistant director of the Joint U. S. Military Advisory and Planning Group and in July 1950 became its director.

After duty as GO3 at the Pentagon, he was sent to Korea in August 1952 for duty as IX Corps CG.

He had previously been Chief of Plans and Policies Division, G5 (Civil Affairs), AFPE. His last assignment in the U. POW Resistance Brings Bronze Star Medals

Awards to six soldiers who "openly and steadfastly resisted" Communist indoctrination attempts despite brutal torture by Communist guards, were announced this week by the Army.

Bronze Star Medals are being presented to two officers and four enlisted men, the first Army POW's to be decorated, whose refusal to participate in Communist propaganda inspired fellow prisoners of war to resist indoctrination efforts.

General Matthew B. Ridgway, Army Chief of Staff, emphasized that "it is the duty of every soldier who falls into the hands of the enemy to resist attempts to indoctrinate him or to extract information from him."

"These men," he said "are not being decorated for having done their duty, but rather for having done that duty under extreme difficulty and without regard for personal welfare or safety. Their very actions aroused hope and increased determination in their fellow prisoners."

Recipients of the awards are: Edward M. Gaither, who was discharged from the Army 21 Dec. 1953. The former corporal was taken prisoner 2 Nov. 1950, while serving with the 1st Cavalry Division.

Pvt. Ernest E. Haskins, presently on duty at Ft. Ord, Calif. He was taken prisoner 30 Nov. 1950, while fighting with the 25th Division.

1st Lt. Robert P. Howell, who became a prisoner of war 27 Nov. 1950.

Charles N. Loutitt, who received his discharge from the Army 28 Oct. 1953. The former corporal was captured after suffering head and shoulder wounds 25 May 1951.

1st Lt. Paul T. O'Dowd, presently a patient in Letterman AH, San Francisco. The artillery officer was serving with the 2d Division when taken prisoner 13 Feb. 1951. He had previously been decorated with the Bronze Star and the Air Medal for action in the Korean fighting.

Sgt. Martin R. Watson, now serving with the 82d Airborne Division at Ft. Bragg, N. C. After being dropped with a squad of Rangers behind enemy lines, 31 March 1951, the paratrooper disrupted Red communication and supply lines, then voluntarily stayed behind to cover the withdrawal of his men. For this action he was awarded the Silver Star.

Army School Commandants Attend OCAFF Conference

The Commandants of six of the Army's service schools with key staff assistants and observers from the Department of the Army attended a two-day conference at Ft. Monroe, Va., with Lt. Gen. John E. Dahlquist, Chief of Army Field Forces, and members of his staff on 3 and 4 Feb.

The conference dealt with the curricula and operation of the schools. The Chief of Army Field Forces supervises Army schools as part of the Army's training program.

Those in attendance included Maj. Gen. J. E. Moore, Army War College; Maj. Gen. H. I. Hodes, Command and General Staff College; Maj. Gen. Guy S. Meloy, The Infantry School; Maj. Gen. John H. Collier, the Armored School; Maj. Gen. C. E. Hart, the Artillery School, and Maj. Gen. S. R. Mickelsen, Anti-Aircraft and Guided Missiles Branch of the Artillery School. Also in attendance was Maj. Gen. Albert Pierson of the Joint Airborne Troop Board.

Marine Operating Forces

Newly released Congressional testimony by Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah reports that despite a cut in manpower, Marine Corps strength in the operating forces will go up in the next fiscal year.

The Marines are slated to end the current fiscal year with 225,000 officers and men and will lose 10,000 more in fiscal '55.

At the beginning of fiscal '55, said Dr. Hannah, 126,000 Marines or 56 per cent of total strength, will be in the operating forces, but this number will increase to 133,000, or 62 per cent a year later.

USMCR Tours Extended. Three Years Instead of Two

The Marine Corps has completed plans which will require men who enroll in the Platoon Leaders Class after 1 July 1954 to serve three years of active commissioned duty, instead of the present two-year tour.

Officer Candidate Course candidates who enrolled after 1 Feb. are now subject to the new policy change.

The Marine Corps pointed out that this new obligated active duty service does not apply to OCC and PLC candidates who are now enrolled, or to those whose applications are awaiting approval. Neither does it apply to reserve officers now on active duty.

Current and future officer requirements of the Marine Corps make desirable longer periods of active duty for all newly-commissioned reserve officers, General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., Marine Corps Commandant, said. He also stated that the additional service requirement for reserve officers does not apply to college women who apply for the Corps' Women Officer Training Course.

The next WOTC course is scheduled for June 1954 at the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va.

Maj. Gen. Mathewson Named JCS Joint Staff Director

Maj. Gen. Lemuel Mathewson, USA, will succeed Lt. Gen. Frank F. Everest, USAF, as Director, Joint Staff, Joint Chiefs of Staff, on 15 March, the Department of Defense has announced.

General Everest has served in this position since 23 Apr. 1953. He will replace Lt. Gen. Earle E. Partridge, USAF, as Air Force Deputy Chief of Staff (Operations).

General Mathewson's latest assignment was CG, Communications Zone, U.S. Army, Europe.

There's a good possibility General Mathewson will be advanced to three-star rank in the JCS post.

Continue Combat Tax Cut

The House Ways and Means Committee has voted to extend the existing $200 per month tax exemption for military personnel in the combat zone (Korea) from its scheduled expiration on 1 Jan. 1955 to an indefinite date. The Committee approved a plan to continue the special exemption as long as the draft is in effect.

The exemption eliminates income tax payments for virtually all enlisted men in Korea and cuts substantially the income tax paid by officers during their service in the combat zone.

The 506th Army Helicopter Company at Ft. Benning, Ga., has added five additional Piasecki helicopters to its fleet of aircraft, according to Maj. William G. Kilmer.

Known as Army mules, the helicopters were flown to Ft. Benning from the factory by pilots of the 509th Helicopter Company at Ft. Bragg, N. C.

Two more Piaseckis are scheduled to be delivered to the 506th in several weeks, officials said. They will build the strength of the unit to one platoon of Piaseckis and two platoons of Sikorskys, a total of 21 ships. The 506th also has two utility helicopters, manufactured by Hiller.

The Sikorskys are used in support of The Infantry School, and the Piaseckis for training pilots and mechanics of the 506th.

5th Avenue in Ohio

■ WRIGHT-PATTERSON AFB, OHIO. A Promenade on Fifth Avenue was the theme of the Spring Fashion Show 5 Feb. when the Woman's Club held their monthly meeting.

The luncheon tables were decorated with spring flowers, and the Valentine motif was carried out in the club. Mrs. Marvin Demler, Vice President, presided over the meeting.

In the main dining room, a large backdrop showing the fronts of famous fashion centers in New York's Fifth Avenue set the stage for the show. The models walked down this famous street and walked through the audience. Another stage was set up in the ball room to resemble a modeling agency. The backdrop here was a large replica of a fashion magazine artistically slashed in the middle so that each model could step through the magazine onto the stage. Then the models passed through this audience.

Mrs. W. B. Packard injected a bit of comedy by appearing as a typical country girl from Possum-Holler with an urge to get dressed up with the newest creations.

Mrs. James E. Davoli made the narrations in the dining room, and Mrs. A. P. Bush gave the narrations in the ball room. Teen-age Collections Supply Libraries In Japan

■ CAMP CRAWFORD, HOKKAIDO, JAPAN. Hokkaido's counterpart to stateside magazine collectors are a group of American youngsters, who monthly make the cry of "any magazines today," to parents and neighbors of the Dependent area.

Locally known as the Camp Crawford Teen Age Club, this group represents the "leg men" in the Women's Club efforts to supply Hokkaido libraries with American magazines and books.

Extra books, magazines and other English reading material normally gathering dust in closets and hallways, are collected and packed in boxes by the children, the fourth

Thursday of each month.

The magazines are then loaded on a 2½ ton military vehicle, and transported to the American Cultural Center in Sapporo, where Mr. James Elliott, Director of the Center, carefully sorts and makes final preparation for shipment to Japanese libraries.

To insure an equitable circulation to all institutions, distribution is then made to local libraries and colleges by the Center on a lending basis.

The magazine drive was started several months ago by the Women's Club when it was learned from the Cultural Center in Sapporo of how inadequately stocked Japanese libraries were in English language reading material.

Magazines on American landscaping, kitchen recipes and home improvements are the most popular, according to Mrs. Betty Lee, wife of Major C. G. Lee, and past Chairman of the Club and organizer of the drive.

Off-Duty Study At Bragg

■ FT. BRAGG, N. C. Representatives of national, North Carolina and local civilian recreation agencies toured Ft. Bragg this week to see how civilian recreational facilities could add more pleasure to the off-duty recreation time for the troopers at the Home of the Airborne.

Miss Marion Preece and Mr. Arthur Williams of the National Recreational Association, Mr. Ralph Andrews of the North Carolina Recreation Commission, and Mr. Selwyn Orcutt, Director of the City of Fayetteville Parks and Recreation Department spent the day, 8 Feb., visiting Ft. Drive Doubled At Slocum

■ FT. SLOCUM, N. Y. Not only did the personnel of Ft. Slocum match their own donations of 1953 to the March of Dimes but the servicemen more than doubled their contributions to the 1954 drive, with a total of $767.87 for this worthy cause.

Much of the enthusiastic response, according to Capt. John P. McInnes, Drive Chairman at Ft. Slocum, was due to the efforts of the NCO Club who presented a check for $25, and, to the Officers' Club who not only submitted the sum of $50 from their Bingo activities but also donated two prizes especially for the occasion.

"Dimes" were the theme of one of the weekly dances at the Post Service Club, and thanks to this ingenious idea of Miss Margaret Culverwell the Club Director, the fund was increased even more.

Assisting Captain McInnes in the March of Dimes Drive at Ft. Slocum were: Capt. Richard H. Timmins, Armed Forces Information School; and, Warrant Officers Clemis Garret and Donald Hanset, both of the Chaplain School.

A check covering this collection will be presented to the New Rochelle Committee of the March of Dimes in a brief, formal ceremony.

Base Hospital Theater Converted For Teen-Agers

ROBINS AFB, GA. The recent official opening of the Teen-Agers' Club was termed a "great success" by the many parents present, the Teen-Age Council members, and the teen-agers themselves.

The former base hospital theatre building, in which the opening was held, was transformed into an ideal clubhouse for the teen-agers after several weeks of preparation in which adults and the youngsters pitched in to clean, paint, and decorate.

In a short ceremony WRAMA Chaplain J. W. Roberts, Major, USAF, gave the invocation and turned the program over to the Master of Ceremonies, Bob Saunders, one of the teen-age members of the club.

Bob introduced Maj. Gen. K. E. Tibbetts, Commander of Warner Robins Air Materiel Area, who, in turn, introduced the newly elected officers of the club. They are: President, Sally Copeland; Vice President, David Earl; Secretary and Treasurer, Nancy Houston; and Sergeant-at-Arms, Bob Saunders.

He also announced the winner of the contest to select the best name for the teen-age club. The $5 award was won by Greg Hudson who suggested it be named the LAHF Club (meaning "Let's All Have Fun").

Col. William R. Forbes, representing the fourteenth Air Force, congratulated the teen-agers and the Teen-Age Council for their splendid work in the formation of the club.

Heavy Paperwork "Our Greatest Enemy," Says Lt. Col.; Charges It Damages Morale

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The Army continues to bury its real objectives and its soldiers under a tremendous, ever-increasing volume of paperwork. This is precipitated by our growing army of "desk-indoctrinated" soldiers bolstered by an ever-increasing staff of specialists. The volume of "fringe" requirements goes up and up and up—the Information and Education Program (with its almost weekly changes in requirements and reports), Intelligence (the sole contribution of innumerable so-called Intelligence Specialists is the simple tabulation of information given to them by the real G2's—the front-line infantrymen), Military Policemen (in numbers to provide for every contingency), Publicity (that for the greater part has become, above all else, a plaything contributing to the egotism of commanders), Army Education (that demands that every two-year draftee be schooled until he attains during his limited time of usefulness to the Army the equivalent of a fourth grade education), "Idea-A-Day" Career Management (that revises efficiency report forms yearly and is now back where they started ten years ago), all these and innumerable other special interests publish literature and directives entirely out of proportion to need—and STATISTICS, STATISTICS, STATISTICS—reports to justify individual jobs, reports to justify top-heavy headquarters, reports upon which to build reputations.

The fanatics on paperwork, fighting to justify or enhance their own positions, are making unreasonable demands on the troops. The creation of a pretty paper picture, by men so involved that they have no time to visit the units and get a true picture, is now, and has been for some time, the accepted measure of accomplishment.

Staffs and unit commanders are submerged in reports, studies, literature, and inconsequential directives and demands on their time that contribute absolutely nothing to sound training and getting ready for combat. The staffs cannot visit the units; the unit commander cannot be with his men. The same studies, the same material, the same "ideas" are put on paper innumerable times year after year, and the troops have to read the trite ideas, and worse yet, implement them in innumerable ways.

Innumerable boards and research organizations conclude long periods of study, to visits to units, ridiculous unit tests, and other requirements on troop time, by distributing nicely bound, colorful booklets (of a type that the Army could never before afford) which include statistics supporting facts that every "Simple Simon" has known for years. No one has time to read all this material. There is too much of it. The "persons who know" read only the conclusions and either chuckle to themselves or grumble. It appears to those on the receiving end that no one ever says "NO" to the job creators, self-seekers, and half-baked salesmen who have special projects and resultant reading material to pass on.

Ironically, a new practice has grown up whereby the troop staffs are burdened with the preparation of most of the higher staff's studies that furnish a basis for the directives that go to the troops. The number of the studies referred to lower headquarters and to units so that "the higher staff officer can make his study" has reached a ridiculous proportion; and further, when reductions in personnel are imposed, the lower staffs take the cut. The number of "doers" is reduced, not the higher "writing" staffs that make work!

Prescribed training subjects, prescribed time, prescribed manner, prescribed steps, in prescribed sequence, with the inevitable, multitudinous last-minute changes to take care of the whims of staff specialists and commanders, leave little room for personal initiative and action. A very pretty up-to-the-minute chart hangs on a headquarters office wall showing that all men have had their training, to include the prescribed number of hours in the "inconsequential" subjects in the specialist fields. This gives the specialist or the "desk-indoctrinated" staff officer or commander his protection. Every hour and subject is accounted for, but how could we find a better way of undermining initiative, leadership, and discipline. A present-day commander below Army level cannot plan and expect to carry out a reasonable part of his own comprehensive training program. It is fully recognized that the present Army Training Programs (eliminating the special knick-knacks) are basically splendid programs, and that guidance and direction is of great assistance in insuring attainment of training objectives, but there comes a point where a commander loses every vestige of control and command.

The strangest Army-wide practice that has grown up is that of publishing for wide distribution lengthy unimportant reports, verbatim transcripts of inconsequential meetings, and blow by blow reports of minor training exercise. A one or two page summary could include everything essential. The strangest part of all this is those responsible for such documents are praised rather than censured.

The creation of obviously valueless paperwork has much to do with morale! Frustrated in their attempts to break away from fruitless demands on their time and effort and to free themselves in order to do beneficial work, officers are looking for positions in civilian life where they can realize some satisfaction in accomplishment. The Officer Corps as a whole recognizes the "vicious trend"—that can and is drastically reducing the efficiency of our Army.

This growing cancer can only be eliminated by drastic action at the highest level. Our youngest officers are being indoctrinated in a "paper environment" to the extent that a high percentage have accepted this as "the only way" to do their work. And a higher percentage of the older officers, including those who complain most vehemently about non-essential directives, have unconsciously fallen into the groove and are "cogs" in the "grind-out-more-paper" machine. Just analyze, yourself, the number of documents you could have avoided writing if you were not yourself falling victim to a system that "writes" rather than "sees and reports," "acts," or "commands."

There has been no let-up since World War II in the labyrinth of meaningless demands that keep the entire Officer Corps running in circles accomplishing very little in proportion to the effort exerted. Time to think problems out has not been available. If the Army as a whole could just stop writing special regulations and directives affecting the troops for just one year, and everyone were directed to sit back and do some serious thinking about this particular problem, we could possibly get back on the right track. Drastic action such as this would have to be taken to reverse the present trend. Some way must be found to channelize the efforts of higher staffs into essential work only. The troop commanders and staffs will tell you that they could get along supremely well without the advice and requirements that stem from these "fat" staffs. An analysis of current publications could beneficially occupy our higher staffs for the year during which we have declared the moratorium on new directives.

Don't underestimate this growing menace—this monster created by officers either lacking in perception and command experience, or without a proper appreciation of the full impact of what they are going to the lower staffs and to the units. This "Paper Frankenstein" is as insidious a weapon as our Communist enemies could hope to employ. To measure its accomplishment in terms of putting manpower out of action—it has demobilized our staff officer effectiveness by keeping them ungainfully employed (in terms of promoting combat efficiency, long range or otherwise) at least fifty per cent of the time, and by keeping our unit officers employed in non-essential and fruitless effort anywhere from thirty to eighty per cent of the time.

HOW CAN WE SUBSTANTIATE THESE ALLEGATIONS!? WELL, PUT THEM TO A VERY SIMPLE TEST. ASK THE FARSIGHTED, EXPERIENCED OFFICERS WHO HAVE COMMANDED TROOPS OR SERVED ON TROOP STAFFS SINCE WORLD WAR II WHAT THEY THINK.

I may be another Don Quixote fighting a windmill, but I will not say, "What's the use?" Someone once said that a person who aims an arrow at the noonday sun, though he may not hit it, will always shoot higher than a person who aims at a bush. There may be hope.

I have vowed that as long as this abominable situation continues, I will strengthen my own little pledge (to fight the paper monster) year after year by lining up the soldiers in my command in formation in zero weather and reading to them all the page-long Christmas Greetings Messages To The Troops that I have been directed to read (in formation) to them. This will include the messages not only from the highest level and all the intermediate commanders, but also those that the regimental and battalion commander wrote. (They, too, have fallen "victim" to the "write rather than act" indoctrination.) When I do this, my soldiers, being good soldiers, will bear it, but I'll know what they're thinking. Let's omit any vile expressions, but it is the same thing I think about ninety per cent of the manuscripts I am required to read—What a waste of time, money, effort, manpower, and paper. I'll walk away from that formation reiterating a New Year's resolution that I hope and pray for the sake of our Army won't have to be repeated too many times.

programs. Plans for this have been in the making for some time: Maj. Gen. Johannes A. Bach, Chief of the Air Materiel Command of the Royal Netherlands Air Force, has been in this country for a fortnight, and Cornelis Staf, Minister of Defense, arrived this past week for a series of conferences with President Eisenhower, Secretaries Wilson and Kyes, Admiral Radford, and the three armed services.

SOUTH KOREA has completed induction into the ROK army of 3,700 North Koreans taken prisoner and declining repatriation. Most of them are in the replacement training camps which Maj. Gen. Cornelius Ryan during his Korean assignment brought to high efficiency. Of the 3,900 remaining ex-North Koreans, some are physically unfit and the remainder are asking civilian employment. A group of 1,000 who were tendered in a body for the Korean Service Corps were declined by General Maxwell D. Taylor because they had been forcibly inducted; it is indicated that they will be permitted to volunteer.

Civilian Aircraft Would Give Forces Four Times Lift Ready At Pearl Harbor

Hailing the teamwork between commercial airlines and the Armed Services as operating at "an extraordinarily high level," Assistant Air Force Secretary Roger Lewis said this week that over 300 airliners are designed as reserve for military operations.

"This program," said Mr. Lewis, "is designed to go into effect on 48 hours' notice and will give to our Armed Forces four times the lift we received at Pearl Harbor."

Assistant Secretary Lewis spoke at a luncheon sponsored by the Reserve Officers' Association where the Association's Scroll was presented to former Under Secretary of the Army Earl D. Johnson, now president of the Air Transport Association.

Mr. Lewis outlined the help that the commercial airlines give to the Air Force and noted that, although the Air Force's objective is improved military aircraft, "what we learn is freely available to the manufacturers and to the carriers for what use they can make of it."

He cited two specific examples where Air Force studies may help the airline industry.

Said Mr. Lewis:

"An essential ingredient of air power is of course mobility, and since United States air power has become global in scope, we find that there is much to be done and we are attacking the problem with great energy. For example, under usual military supply formula, the engine pipeline from manufacturer to depot across the seas and from depot to user is about 200 days. The current cost for jet engines makes 200 days' supply represent quite an investment and provides the opportunity for real reduction in the cost of military operation.

"Improved procedures, better equipment, and airlift instead of transport by surface promise not only enormous economies in materiel but greater mobility as well.

"Packaging is another field in which a great deal can be accomplished. For every four tons shipped to the field only about one ton constitutes actual supplies. The balance is in packaging and crating. Better crating or, better yet, no crating at all where air movement can be counted upon, offer means of great savings to the taxpayer for more airpower at a lower cost.

"These are but two of the fields on which we are working, but they are fields in which we can and will work with the airlines and from which we can mutually profit."

scale delivery to the Netherlands and other NATO countries later this year.

Republic Aviation will be reimbursed for its assistance and for the personnel and data which it will make available to Avio-Diepen. No license for manufacture is involved, and the Dutch firm does not expect to fabricate parts. Present plans call for them to be obtained from existing sources.

New Air Radar Developed, Power Rating Doubled

General Electric is turning out search radars twice as powerful as previous airborne units for use in Navy and Air Force "flying radar stations," converted Lockheed Super-Constellations.

These high-altitude, four-engine planes will be used by the Navy as radar stations to fly off our Atlantic and Pacific coasts. The Air Force will use them to supplement its land-based "radar fence." Because land-based radar beams do not bend over the horizon, the flying radar stations will greatly extend the detection range of the "radar fence."

Despite the increased power, the weight and size of the new radar and indicator systems have been kept down by use of printed circuit techniques in manufacturing. Nearly all electronic chassis are printed wiring sub-assemblies which are easily maintained and replaced individually, if necessary.

Navy Lives Off Shelf, $5 Billion Supply Cut

Since the establishment of the Integrated Navy Supply System seven years ago by the then Secretary of the Navy James P. Forrestal, the Navy has used about $5 billion more in supply materials than it has purchased from industry.

The Navy also has turned back to the Federal Treasury about one and a half billion dollars in cash which has been reflected in appropriations.

The Navy Supply System, based on close inventory control by offices called Supply Demand Control Points, was approved by Mr. Forrestal on 14 Feb. 1947. The system has made possible more accurate inventory reporting and coordination of stocks. Under the system each inventory control point maintains a continuing record of the categorized items under its control.

Named to Defense Staff

G. Dean Garner, vice president of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Co., has been appointed Staff Director for Communications on the Staff of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Supply and Logistics) effective 15 Feb.

Mr. Garner, who resigned from his present position with Southern Bell on 1 Feb., will be responsible for the development of systems and policies for communications services for the military departments and the elimination of unnecessary duplication of facilities both for current and mobilization needs.

Some Thunderstreaks To Be Replaced By Super Sabres

The Air Force announced this week that it was cutting back its orders for Republic F-84F Thunderstreaks and replacing them with an increased number of North American F-100 Super Sabres.

Although the exact number of cancelled planes was not disclosed, the Air Force said the total figure represented 15 per cent of F-84F's produced or on order.

Production delays were given as the reason for the decision to cancel the production of some Thunderstreaks. Although "both engine and airframe difficulties" have been substantially overcome, the Air Force said, the delays "moved the program back to such a degree that the later F-100 airplane could be substituted for the last part of the program."

The directive will reduce the number of J-65 engines currently being turned out for the F-84F's by the Wright Aeronautical Division of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation and the Buick Motor Division of General Motors Corporation. However, there will be no reduction in the number of F-84F's scheduled for production at the Farmingdale, Long Island, plant of Republic Aviation Corporation, the prime contractor, the Air Force said.

Allison Div. Sales Up

E. B. Newell, vice president of General Motors and general manager of the Allison Division, has revealed that the division's sales during 1953 were higher than during any war year.

Although no exact figures were disclosed, Mr. Newell declared that last year exceeded by a third the best war year. He predicted a slight drop in sales during 1954, but added that "they will still be better than any war year."

In discussing Allison's aircraft engine production, Mr. Newell stated that engines up to 12,500-horsepower had been manufactured since WWII, and he predicted that in the near future we would have engines turning out 23,000-horsepower. The P-38 engine made by Allison during WWII developed only 2,000-horsepower.

MSTS Returns Two Ships

The Military Sea Transportation Service has arranged with the Maritime Administration's Office of National Shipping Authority and Government Aid to return two General Agency Agreement ships to the National Reserve Fleet, it was announced this week.

The ships, both Mariner type cargo vessels, are now operated by private American steamship companies for the MSTS account.

The Cotton Mariner will be laid up in the National Defense Reserve Fleet at Mobile, Ala., and the Nutmeg Mariner will be laid up in the Hudson River Reserve Fleet.

These inactivations, which are expected to be completed during March, will bring to a total of 127 the number of General Agency Agreement ships which will have been moth-balled by MSTS since July 1953.

USMA Grad Returns To High Industry Job

Col. John W. Atwood, director of The Signal School's Enlisted Department at Ft. Monmouth, N. J., the past two years, leaves active service this week for a top position in civilian industry.

The 33-year old Army colonel, who was graduated from the West Point class of '42, is returning to the Hoffman Pad'co Corporation in Los Angeles as production manager for the large West Coast firm.

Colonel Atwood, before his present assignment here at the Signal Corps Center of the Army, was assistant production manager with the Hoffman firm for five years. He is now on Army reserve status.

Colonel Atwood was Signal Officer of the 11th Airborne Division from 1943 to 1947, serving three years with the unit in the Pacific Theater.

As head of the Enlisted Department, Colonel Atwood supervised The Signal School's functions of training Signal Corps specialists. The School comprises twenty-two courses in radio, radar, wire and photo, with a present enrollment of approximately 5,000 students.

Rossford Depot "Unified"

Garage equipment and certain other maintenance tools will be procured in the future for all the Armed Forces by the Rossford Ordnance Depot, Toledo, Ohio, Col. R. J. Hogan, commanding officer, has announced.

Previously, these items which consist of battery chargers, gas and electric welders, frame straighteners, timing lights, electrical and other test equipment, were procured by the Ordnance Tank-Automotive Center in Detroit.

Items not affected by the transfer order are special purpose maintenance tools such as engine stands and cradles, reamers, pullers and other equipment designated by the Army to do specific repair jobs.

Dunn Named Design Chief

Thomas W. Dunn, former nuclear projects director, has been named Chief Design Engineer of the Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics Corporation.

A graduate of Webb Institute of Naval Architecture, Dunn joined General Dynamics in 1931 as a hull structural draftsman. Since that time he has worked with various types of boats and gained a reputation as an expert in submarine. In fact, he was in charge of the design phase of the atomic-powered Nautilus which was launched last month.

Road-Rail Ambulance, Bus, Truck; All in One Vehicle

A vehicle which can serve either as a bus, ambulance or cargo carrier, and which is equipped with flanged wheels permitting it to operate on both highways and standard gauge railroad tracks, has been developed by Transportation Research and Development Command at Ft. Eustis, Va.

Designated the Twin Coach Convertible, F-32-F, the vehicle can be used as a 36-passenger bus. With seats removed and overhead luggage racks lowered to provide screened protection for windows, it can be used as a cargo carrier. Big double doors at the rear permit it to be loaded like a conventional highway trailer.

Luggage racks can be removed and six litters installed overhead without interfering with seated passengers. Or the seats can be folded back to make room for six additional litters. As a full ambulance coach with all but one seat removed, 18 litters can be accommodated. The remaining seat would be used for medical attendants.

The flanged wheels are operated electro-hydraulically from the bus power plant, a six-cylinder pancake engine. When both the front and rear flanged wheels are on the track and extended to their normal operating position, the rear flanged wheels carry about 40 per cent of the rear weight and the rear inside dual tires, which rest on the rail heads, carry 60 per cent of the rear weight of the bus. These rear wheels also provide traction and braking functions. The front end of the bus is raised so that the rubber-tired wheels are clear of the rail or any normal obstruction.

RCA Wins Guided Missile Subcontract Award In Fla.

The RCA Service Company has been subcontracted to conduct the communications and electronics operations of some of the range activities of the USAF Test Center, Patrick AFB, Fla.

Pan American World Airways, Inc., which was awarded the contract for operation of the range activities at Patrick, announced the subcontracting of the electronics portion of the contract to RCA.

In preparation for full-scale operation on the project, RCA had organized a Missile Test Project section under the company's Government Service Division.

The contract calls for Pan American to carry out operations at the Cape Canaveral launching site and at down-range tracking stations extending through the Bahama Islands to Puerto Rico.

The RCA Service Company will conduct the instrumentation, communication and electronics work at these locations. In addition, its engineers and technicians will also assist in training members of the Armed Forces in installation, maintenance and operation of electronics equipment.

AIA Publishes Pamphlet

The Aircraft Industries Association has published a reference manual outlining methods of cutting aircraft production costs.

The pamphlet, "Conservation Handbook . . . for Use of the Industry and Military Services" . . . was prepared by the Conservation Panel of the Manufacturing Methods Committee of AIA to serve as a ready reference for groups establishing new conservation programs or seeking ideas for improvement of programs already in existence.

Dutch Agreement Signed For Aircraft Maintenance

Contractual agreements to implement the maintenance of Republic Thunderjet fighter-bombers flown by the Royal Netherlands Air Force have been signed by Republic Aviation International, and the Dutch firm, Industriemaatschappij Avio-Diepen.

The Netherlands Air Force is now flying a number of Republic fighters which were obtained through the Mutual Defense Assistance Program.

Similar work is also expected to be performed on new swept-wing F-84F Thunderstreaks, scheduled for large

Gen. Wood Tells of Defense Annual Review Team

NATO and of USRO, the U. S. Mission to NATO and European Regional Organizations.

After the NATO Conference at Lisbon in 1951 it was agreed that an International Staff would be constituted in Paris. In May of the same year Lord Ismay was appointed Secretary General. Lord Ismay reports to the NATO Permanent Council, through it to the NATO governments, and directly to the Ministers of those governments at their Annual Review Meetings. "Ministers" in the case of the U. S. refers to the Secretaries of State, Defense and Treasury, and the Director of the Foreign Operations Administration. All of these individuals were present in Paris for the final meetings of the 1952 Annual Review, and in last December for those of the 1953 Annual Review.

The International Staff has three principal subdivisions—Political Affairs, Production and Logistics, and Economic Affairs, each headed by an Assistant Secretary General. From an international standpoint, the basic work on the Annual Review is done by a committee of the Permanent Council known as the "Council Committee on the Annual Review." This Committee consists of a representative from each of the NATO countries and is chaired by Mr. van Vredenburg, who is Lord Ismay's Deputy Secretary General. The International Staff, it should be noted, does not have a military subdivision as such. Instead, military advice to the Permanent Council and to the Council Committee on the Annual Review is furnished by the Standing Group Liaison Office, a branch of the Standing Group which is permanently stationed in Paris.

The United States Mission, of which Ambassador John C. Hughes is the Chief, consists of four principal offices (Political, Defense, Financial and Economic Affairs), each headed by an "Advisor" to the Chief of Mission. The Director of each office carries the personal rank of Minister and each is responsible, through Ambassador Hughes, to his respective cabinet officer in Washington.

Ambassador Hughes, who reports to the Secretary of State, is responsible for U. S. representation on and consultation and negotiation with committees of the North Atlantic Council and the NATO International Staff. During the work on the 1953 Annual Review the Director of the Office of Political Affairs in USRO, Mr. Edwin M. Martin, represented Ambassador Hughes at the meetings of the Council Committee on the Annual Review. and the Chief of the Defense Annual Review Team acted as the latter's military advisor.

The Defense Annual Review Team is not a large organization. In addition to the Chief and his Deputy it consists of six officers drawn from the three U. S. Services. Three of these officers constitute a Force Analysis Team, while the other three form the Defense Policy and Programs Section. As its name indicates, the duty of the former is to prepare studies analyzing the force plans of each of the NATO countries. The latter section handles broad over-all policy matters which are not susceptible of the force analysis approach.

DART works closely with the other divisions of the Office of Defense Affairs and with two additional groups in particular. The first of these is the EUCOM Annual Review Branch, a group of four officers which furnishes constant liaison between DART and that part of Headquarters US EUCOM (Military Assistance Division) which deals with Mutual Defense Assistance Program (MDAP) activities. A second is a costing and screening group which is part of the Office of the Defense Comptroller, Europe, a branch of the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense, Comptroller. The mission of this latter group is to furnish advice based on a review of the defense plans of the other NATO countries from the Comptroller's point of view—a "screening and costing" operation.

Naturally DART also works closely with the other portions of the USRO organization, with liaison officers from the NATO major commanders (SACEUR and SACLANC) with the Standing Group Liaison Office, and with that portion of the International Staff which is engaged in the Annual Review.

The procedure of the Annual Review is initiated by the International Staff, which sends out to each country, early in the year, a questionnaire dealing with forces, equipment, and defense expenditures. When the replies to this questionnaire are received in mid-summer they are referred to the NATO major commanders for review and comment. Upon receipt of this comment and recommendations, in the late summer, the International Staff begins the drafting of "Country Chapters" (for the Annual Review Report). At the same time drafts are prepared on "General Subjects." The range of the latter is, of course, unlimited and may include topics ranging from "Annual Recurring Costs" through "Major Problems in Equipment and Production" to "Adequacy of Transport."

It is in the Council Committee of the Annual Review that these draft chapters are discussed, one by one, paragraph by paragraph, and often sentence by sentence. In daily meetings, from late summer until late fall, the Committee gradually formulates the heavily documented Annual Review Report, which forms the basis for the Resolutions agreed to in the Ministers' Meeting. A principal one of these Resolutions in the 1953 Review was agreement on force goals—firm for 1954, provisional for 1955, and planning for 1956.

The basic task of DART is to undertake studies of countries' military plans and the recommendations of major commanders, provide the focus for the interests of all U. S. defense agencies concerned, find a means of coordinating the views of these agencies, and discuss these views in USRO and with the International Staff. The Team is guided by directives received from Washington, by advice from the MAAGs and the Military Missions, by studies prepared at Headquarters US EUCOM, by discussions with the other sections of USRO, by contact with liaison officers from SACLANC and SACEUR and, finally, by its day-to-day work with the Standing Group Liaison Office and the International Staff.

This may seem complicated. It is, but more so in theory than in fact. One can only point out the obvious: a simple method of dealing with the problems of fourteen sovereign nations has not yet been devised. Until it is, the task of the U. S. organization, which must also deal with these problems, can hardly be less simple than that of the national and international organizations with which it has to work.

New Uniform Looms

situation is expected to be reached with dispatch.

This is essential because new clothing stocks must be ordered beginning this Spring.

For this reason, because Army clothing stocks now are at a relatively low level, the cost factor involved in a uniform change is of diminished importance.

Pentagon authorities have said that if a new uniform is adopted, present stocks will be used up and that consequently the cost of changing the uniform, as far as the Government is concerned, will be small.

Similarly, extended wear-out periods will certainly be authorized for officers to prevent financial hardships.

It has been reported that should a new Army uniform be adopted, it will take 18 months to get it to the field.

From two to four years would be required for its complete integration on an Army-wide basis.

Sec'y Talbott Tells AF Academy Cost

he intends "to see to it that we get the biggest dollar's worth we can bargain for."

At the same time, the Air Secretary said "A first rate Air Force must have a first rate Academy and I feel certain that the Congress will provide for just that."

Others testifying in favor of the bill were Assistant Secretary of Defense John A. Hannah, and Lt. Gen. H. R. Harmon, Special Assistant to the Air Force Secretary for Academy Matters.

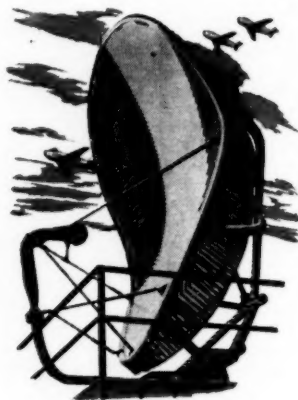

Secretary Hannah said "In any operation, the cost must be weighed against the potential return to the investors. It is our belief that the return in future leadership will repay the cost of an Air Force Academy many times over. The initial outlay will be amortized over a long period of years."

Doctor Hannah said the Defense Department looks upon the establishment of an AF Academy "as a sound proposition. We are convinced it will insure greater dividends from our over-all defense investment."

General Harmon outlined plans for the Academy curriculum, and the method by

World's Most Reliable Radar

Gilfillan Surveillance Radar has been in operation continuously at the Boston International Airport since 1949, and has established a world record for reliable performance.

For example, during 1953, Gilfillan Surveillance Radar was on guard 24 hours a day, every day—a total of 8760 hours—with only $7\frac{1}{3}$ hours of involuntary outage. This is less than 9/100 of 1%!

If hours were inches, this would be equivalent to a $7\frac{1}{3}$ -inch chip in a tower 175 feet higher than the Washington Monument!

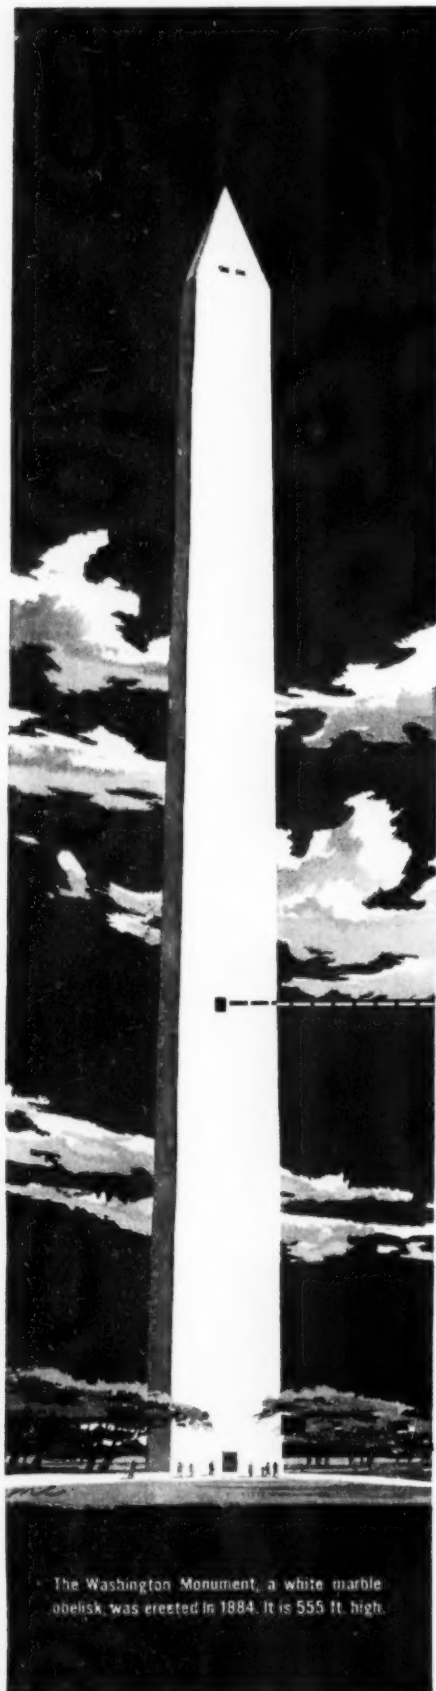

The Boston record is due to dependable, day-in day-out proven performance of perfected radar equipment—and, equally important, superb CAA maintenance.

It is only one instance of the combined efficiency of Gilfillan Surveillance Radar and CAA maintenance personnel at major civil airports in the U.S.

leagues in introducing the legislation that the lack of adequate promotion opportunity for officers has hurt morale.

He noted at that time that under provisions of the Davis Amendment, a second lieutenant might have only one chance in 300 of becoming a brigadier general and would have to attain the age of 103 before reaching that rank.

He said the Armed Forces must promote men "to keep pace with the increasing costs of living and the greater responsibilities brought about by the tremendous advances in the skill required of the operators of modern equipment of warfare."

Representative Arends, urging return to permanent legislation for retirements, said "It is rather inconsistent to place restrictions on promotions which drastically reduce career opportunities in the Armed Forces and at the same time preclude voluntary retirement which further reduces promotion opportunities."

During recent weeks, THE JOURNAL has published charts which show how the Arends Bill will affect the grade structure in each of the Armed Forces, with comparisons of fiscal '54 and fiscal '55.
